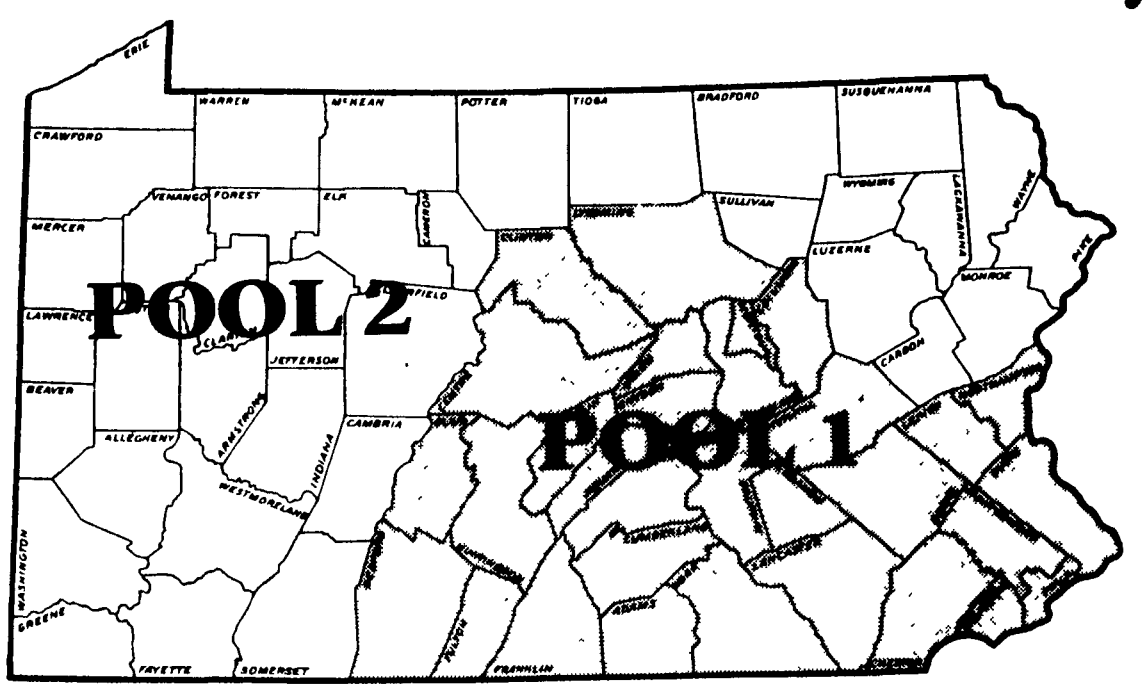
'86 Conservation Reserve may idle 82,000 acres



To account for regional differences in land rental rates, the state has been divided into two bidding pools. Rates general average more than $30 per acre in Pool 1, less in Pool 2

BY JACK HUBLEY

HARRISBURG — Farmers thinking about participating in the Conservation Reserve Program should think fast. The signup period for the 1986 program begins Monday and runs only two weeks until Mar. 14.

At first glance the program appears to be a return to the Soil Bank years of the 1950's. But, whereas the primary goal of Soil Bank was to reduce harvests by taking acreage out of production, the new CRP strives to improve environmental quality by setting aside only highly erodible land. "It's designed to take the worst first," is how Richard Pennay, conservation program specialist for the state Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service office, puts it

By taking at least 40 million acres out of cultivation by 1990, the government hopes to reduce erosion (by 764 million tons annually), improve water quality and enhance wildlife habitat. Hopefully, the program will result in decreased crop production as well, since USDA hopes to defray at least part of its $5 billion cost through reductions in Commodity Credit Corporation payments.

The steep and shallow soils characteristic of land in Soil Capability Classes VI, VII and VIII will be eligible for entry, as will ground in Classes II through V that is eroding at three times the rate of natural soil regeneration. Although officials are hoping to sign up some 82,000 acres in this first round, Pennsylvania actually has about 1.6 million acres that qualify.

To enter the program, a farmer submits a per-acre bid based on average land rental rates. Recognizing that rental rates vary widely, USDA has developed regional bidding pools. Pennsylvania will be divided into two pools. The southeastern and southcentral counties, where rental rates generally average more than $30 an acre and can run more than $100 an acre, are included in Pool 1. The rest of the state, where rates normally average less than $30 an acre, will be in Pool 2 "People bidding within the pools will be bidding against each other," Pennay points out.

No less than 10 acres may be entered, and the land must have been used for crop production at least two years out of the last five. At least two-thirds of a field must

The dairyman's $64,000 question:

What to bid on herd buyout?

BY JAMES H. EVERHART

LANCASTER — Dairymen all across the country are talking, whispering and even mumbling to themselves about the latest wonder from Washington, the herd buyout proposal.

A few are critical of the whole idea. Some doubt that many farmers will participate. And most are very skeptical about the program's chances of success.

But virtually every dairyman is wondering the same thing as the program's March 7 signup deadline draws near: what's a fair bid? And what kind of bid will be accepted?

Adding to their frustration is the relatively tight-lipped approach taken by extension agents and other dairy experts. None of the officials wants to be in a position of telling a dairyman what to bid — especially when so much can go wrong.

One thing is certain: Bid figures quoted privately by experts have climbed substantially since the first estimates were circulated after the 1985 Farm Bill was finally cast in stone just before Christmas last year.

At that time, many private forecasters predicted bids would be in the low teens, with the acceptance level occurring around $7-8 a hundredweight.

Now, however, all bets are clearly off, as dairymen struggle with the complexities of accounting systems and tax laws, and grope for agricultural and off-the-farm sources of new income.

In fact, calculations for dairymen in typical situations, when fully weighted for all contingencies, have been running much higher than anticipated, many as high as $40 to $45, dairy experts said

And clearly, the stakes are much higher.

John Brockett, the Penn State Extension System's business expert and computer guru, has devised a computer program that prompts dairymen to provide a whole range of figures, and analyzes that data into a series of bid information.

And in working with dairymen around the state, he says, he's found a wide range of bids have resulted from input provided by individual producers. From lows under $10 to highs over $80, dairy farmers have been counseled to weigh all the facts . . . and underbid at great risk to their financial health.

One of the problems, explained Lancaster County dairy extension agent Glenn Shirk, is the amount of debt looming over an individual dairyman. Is the producer seeking complete liquidation of his indebtedness with his bid? Then, it

Dairy industry seeks 10-cent assessment

BY JAMES H. EVERHART

WASHINGTON — In what may have been an industry first, dairymen nationwide are virtually united behind a proposal that would actually levy a 10-cent-per-hundredweight assessment on milk production.

The proposal, however, is the lesser of two evils, both wrought by the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings budget-cutting measure passed by the Congress late last year.

Though the deficit-control legislation will not affect the controversial herd-buyout plan, it has been applied to Commodity Credit Corporation purchases of surplus products.

In effect, the budget-cutting plan to take effect today would slice support-price payments by 4.3 percent, trimming the milk support price by about 50 cents

In an effort to head off such a drastic cut in support price — which would be followed April 1 by another 40-cent cut required by the 1985 Farm Bill – a variety of dairy groups have proposed a 10-cent-per-cwt. assessment which would save the CCC as much as the price cut.

Bills to substitute the 10-cent assessment for the 50-cent reduction in support price have been introduced in both the House and Senate, and had made little headway at press time. Presumably, any action as late as next week could roll back the price cuts already being put in place by the CCC at week's end.

USDA officials announced that all CCC purchase prices for cheese, butter and nonfat dry milk would be discounted by 4.3 percent, beginning at the close of business Friday Any products offered for sale after that point would be subject to the lower, Gramm-Rudmanized prices.

To be eligible, products had to be sampled or graded by close of business (5 p.m. local time) Friday, and offers had to be received by midnight at CCC headquarters in Kansas City

Holstein Highlights

Always a traditional highlight, the annual sale held some surprises and a lot of interest at this year's Holstein Convention in Pittsburgh. For Lancaster Farming's extensive coverage of convention activities, turn to pages A20-26.

Perhaps a tribute to the changing face of the dairy industry, promotional activities took on even greater significance at this year's Holstein Convention For highlights of the mall promotion, and a rundown on activities at the Junior Convention turn to pages B18 and B19

Philadelphia Eggs

Report Supplied by USDA

Market Comment: Prices were again unchanged to one cent higher on large sizes; unchanged on mediums. Local sentiment was cautious and mostly steady to fully steady; however, gradable stocks, particularly class ones were in firm hands and higher prices were being paid. Movement of both cartoned and loose egg was generally light to fair, and supplies of all sizes were fully sufficient to handle current trade needs. Mediums were generally in heaviest supply. Pre-Easter demand had surfaced in spots. Elsewhere, traders noted disappointing movement was causing supplies to build and little need to start searching for additional stocks as yet.

A Extra Large .66-.71; A Large .64-.69; A Medium .58-.60.

Delmarva Poultry

Thursday, Feb. 27, 1986

Market Comment: Demand for ready to cook whole birds was moderate to good, and offerings were in good balance overall. Demand for parts continued mixed although a bit lighter in total. Leg and leg quarter interest was tapering in some spots, but clearances were generally maintained. Wings moved to a fair call while clearances of breasts were somewhat irregular but usually improved. Cutlets were available and negotiable in some quarters.

Live supplies were adequate. Weights remained in a full range of light to heavy. Slaughter schedules were moderately heavy. The undertone was fully steady to firm.

Today's L.T.L. asking prices were unchanged on U.S. Grade A at .49-.56 cents.

Estimated slaughter of broiler fryers in Delmarva (000).

Estimated 2/27 1,951,000; Actual 2/20 1,567,000; Actual 2/25 1,917,000; Average Weights 2/25 4.40; Average Weights 2/18 4 38

To Apply Manure

This is the season of the year that a lot of manure is applied in preparation for corn planting We need to be concerned with proper application of liquid and solid manure in such a way as to minimize odors and avoid pollution complaints

Applications should be made from mid-morning to mid-afternoon to allow maximum odor dispersion and manure drying before the calm, nighttime hours when neighbors are home from work. Fields for disposal should be downwind, rather than upwind from neighbors. Whenever possible the manure should be plowed or disked into the soil as soon as possible after spreading This practice not only minimizes odors but also preserve nutrients and reduces potential for surface run-off that causes water pollution

To Attend Poultry Progress Day

The Annual Poultry Progress Day will be held Thursday, March 6, in the Farm and Home Center, Lancaster. Registration will start at 8:30 in the morning and the program will end at 3 p.m. Lunch will be available.

The Poultry Association Education Committee has planned a program which will include Dr Richard Grubb, secretary, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, reviewing the department's Marketing and Export Initiatives; Senator Noah Wenger discussing Waste Management and Your Environment; Dr Larry Jenkins, farm management specialist at Penn State, reviewing Taxes and the Poultry Farmer and an overview of the new farm Bill, Marketing Order Update by John Hoffman, Pennsylvania Poultry Federation; Poultry Pests and Their Control by Dr Clarence Collison, Extension entomologist at Penn State; New Ideas in Poultry Product Development by Bruce Large, Victor F Weaver, Inc ; Equipment and Ventilation Management by Felix Hart, Big Dutchman and Barre Lang, manager Lang Ad Associates reviewing How The Public Views Your Product. We'll also have an Avian Influenza Update

We encourage producers and people interested in the poultry industry to attend this important meeting

To Use Heat Lamps Safely

A portable heat lamp is a useful item a round the home and farm during cold weather The lamp's infra-red rays can be used to keep pigs from freezing, relax aching muscles, or warm crankcases of tractors and automobiles so they'll start easier The heat lamps can also be used in brooders for small pigs or lambs, or baby chicks or at your workbench to give you quick heat

But, I'd like to add a word of caution A heat lamp can be dangerous because the lamp"s rays can easily burn you, the same as a sunburn

Also, if you are using the lamp continuously for a long period, use a porcelain socket Brass and most plastic sockets will not be able to stand the heat Another thing in a brooding area, use a wire or chain to support tha lamp Don't hang it by its cord; the cord was designed to carry the current and not the weight Remember, a heat lamp can come in handy around the farm or home in cold weather But handle it with care

To Develop Good Pesticide Records

The arrival of March means the beginning of a new growing season and warmer weather And, the use of various spray materials and chemicals will be a common practice They're all intended for a special purpose, if used correctly

In order to protect the producer from the danger of having excess residues in food and feed crops, it is very important that accurate records be kept This is true on crops as well as with livestock

In case the producer is charged with excess residues, these written records may save your business Don't rely on your memory or oral statements; they will not stand up at a hearing or in court Be sure records list the name of the material and the rate and date of application

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

A LIVING HOPE

March 2, 1986

Background Scripture: 1 Peter 1:1 through 2:10.

Devotional Reading: 2 Corinthians 5 1-9

In November of last year, 700 people attended a standing-room-only symposium on "Consciousness and Survival," an exploration of life after physical death. What made this symposium so significant was that it was held in Washington, D.C. on the campus of Georgetown University and included in its sponsorship and program a number of prominent figures in political life, religion and science One of the symposium organizers, Sen Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island, was commended for his participation by the Senate minority leader, Sen Robert Byrd, and the Washington Post account of the meeting was voted by the Senate for inclusion in the Congressional Record

IMPERISHABLE

Although the symposium members did not attempt to arrive at any kind of consensus on the subject, the fact that so many people from so many different walks of life came together to discuss the subject indicates that there is a spiritual quest and current in our world that perhaps we tend to underestimate and overlook. This is an era in which millions of people are searching for a hope that does not wither and decay as our social, economic and political institutions and structures do. People are seeking a living hope.

It is this timeless concern to which the first Epistle of Peter was addressed. Writing to the Christians in northern Asia Minor who were either facing or undergoing severe persecution, the writer of 1 Peter brought to these people a message of encouragement and hope in the midst of an ominous situation: "By his great mercy we have been born anew to a living hope through the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, and to an inheritance which is imperishable, undefiled, and unfading..." (1:3,4).

And precisely what is the nature of that imperishable hope he proclaimed? Note that he did not promise that the persecution would soon be over. Nor did he suggest that they would be spared from having to suffer as Christians for their faith. So what kind of hope is that? What kind of confidence can that bring us?

FAITH'S OUTCOME

Actually, the very best of all hopes: "As the outcome of your faith you obtain the salvation of your souls" (1:9). These bodies of ours cannot be sustained forever. The lives we live, no matter how we cling to them, will flicker out sooner or later. The things we build will crumble and turn to dust. We are not saved from the fact of death, but from the consequence of it. Although our bodies perish, if our souls are saved by a loving God, then nothing in the world can take away from us the inheritance that God has prepared for us in his other world.

It may be, as Peter writes, that "now for a little while you may have to suffer various trials," but in time we will be "born anew, not of perishable seed, but of imperishable..." (1:23).

Fed cattle and Hog prices are showing signs of getting lower in the next few weeks. Let's hope they don't drop to much.

Spring is just around the corner, and demand for Feeder Cattle is building up. Our Special Feeder Sale Schedule is March 4th & 18th, April 1st, 15th, and 29th. These sales have become popular with Buyers, because the supply of cattle is usually larger. Plan to use one or all of these sales.

If you would like to advertise your cattle FREE on this card, let us know 1 week ahead.

IT'S A JUNGLE OUT THERE.

Weeds, grasses and trash in no-till corn can be a no-win situation for most herbicides. But not for Bicep plus Princep. They're an unbeatable combination for keeping no-till corn clean all season long.

With Bicep plus Princep in a program you get effective, long-lasting control of annual broadleaf weeds and grasses—even late germinators, like crabgrass and fall panicum. Put Bicep and Princep together on your team for dependable, economical control of no-till weeds and grasses all season long. And be king of the jungle. CIBA-GEIGY

Omaha Weekly

Report Supplied by USDA

Slaughter Steers and Heifers sharply higher for the week. Prices both classes 3.00-5.00 higher than last week's closing levels. A dramatic turn around at direct points created where sellers refused to sell late last week and into this week, coupled with a corresponding stance by packers at the carcass and box beef level, all contributing to sharp upturns this week. Slaughter cows and bulls fully steady.

Estimated 5 day receipts of cattle this week 6,700 compared to actuals last week of 6,364 and 7,231 last year. Slaughter Steers accounting for 42 percent of receipts this week, slaughter heifers 47 percent, slaughter cows 8 percent and feeder cattle 1 percent.

SLAUGHTER STEERS: At the close choice 2-4 1050-1350 lbs. 58.00-59.50, load 59.75. Mixed Good and Choice 2-3 1050-1250 lbs. 56.00-58.00.

The Hisex White and Brown Layers:

Compare the production and feed efficiency of the Hisex White and Hisex Brown layers and you won't find any better, anywhere. And that is a condition that will continue since Hisex research and development keeps improving the breed.

But mere test figures don't tell the whole story. The fact is that good henhouse managers can beat these figures. Hisex field testing has proven that. You may well obtain better feed conversion, mortality, and higher production.

As in all things, you must start with a good, basic product. The good genes, in other words.

See for yourself. Put these great birds to work for you soon. You'll find their average performance produces above average results.

Start every day feeling good... with the best from Funk.

ome next summer, you'll know you've made a wise manage-ent decision. You'll be growing hybrids with a reputation r delivering what farmers want – consistent high yields. That's exactly what you can expect from these hybrids.

New G-4326. Strong overall performance puts this 00-105 hybrid in the must-plant category for many farmers. offers competitive yields for its early maturity long with strong stalks and easy harvesting.

New G-4440. Several years of testing prove -4440 can yield right up at the top of its 110 ay class. It's been delivering this high performance in our test plots in southern Pennsylvania as well as the Corn Belt. Big, showy ears on fast-growing plants make it a roadside eye catcher.

G-4594. Wide adaptability and performance under heat and drought make G-4594 a wise addition to anyone's corn program. You'll really like its large, girthy ears...and the way it stands tough through harvesting.

Three of the best. There's no better way to start every day.

Buyers find 'the real thing' in horsepower

BY MONTIE TAK
Special Correspondent

HARRISBURG – With some people, horse power – the vintage kind – is still in vogue.

Farmers who prefer the feel of leather lines in their hands instead of steering wheels. Those who raise the oats to feed the teams who work the earth to feed the families. People who feel there's not much a man and a good team can't get done.

So when the auto show, the boat show and the motocross championship are merely memories in the Farm Show Complex, then the Pennsylvania Draft Horse and Mule Association holds its annual sale. On February 20, the fifth annual sale was underway, with auctioneers Steve Andrews and Dennis L. Brownawell presiding.

"There was good demand for teams and broke horses," says Elmer D. Lapp, Association chairman. He noted there were a number of buyers from Maryland, New York, Virginia, Connecticut and West Virginia as well as Pennsylvania. They vied in the bidding for the 53 draft horses who were sold for an average $550.

Top price of the sale was $1500 for the Belgian mare, "Windy Willow Katie," consigned by Ezra Kanegy, Belleville, Pa., and purchased by John Rhodes, Alexandria, Pa. Top selling gelding was "Conqueror Supreme Flash," sold by Donald and Janice Ruhl of Manheim to Franklin Harkins, Forest Hills, Md., for $1150

High priced gelding of the sale was "Dick," a three-year old Belgian consigned by Elmer Lapp, Kinzers, Pa., and bought by Daniel Dienner of Gap for $1000. The top selling team was a pair of Belgian mares, "Polly" and "Nell," purchased by Ivan K. Stoltzfus of Narvon for $2300 from Tom Stayer, Alleghany, New York. No mules were consigned to the sale.

"Only a few of the horses were grade horses," says Lapp. "The rest were registered. I didn't feel the sale averaged too badly." He noted tack sold well, with good used collars in demand. "People were also hunting good used harnesses but there weren't too many complete sets there."

One item Lapp did not anticipate seeing pass through the sales ring was a 36 year old photograph of himself driving a hitch of six Belgians pulling a Conestoga wagon. The photograph has been taken when Lapp drove the team from Lancaster to Wheeling, West Virginia to commemorate the 200-year anniversary of the making of the Conestoga wagon. "We even had bells on the horses," remembers Lapp. "And we had over 3000 letters in mail bags in the wagon. Each one had a special stamp on it, too."

The top-selling team was a pair of Belgian mares, Polly and Nell, consigned by Tom Stayer, Allegany, NY.

He says during the journey, he and the Belgians spent a week in the Pittsburgh area visiting different schools. For part of the trip, he drove 97 miles on U.S. Route 40. "That used to be an old Conestoga wagon trail," he notes. "That was all history."

* * * * * * * *

Belgians have been central in Jacob L. Kanagy's life, too. He says he has been raising Belgians all his life as his father did. Kanagy also raises Morgan horses but uses them for road work since he has enough Belgians for draft use.

Pa. Holstein breeders convene in Pittsburgh

BY MARTHA J. GEHRINGER

PITTSBURGH — The "city with a smile," Pittsburgh, welcomed Holstein enthusiasts from around the state to the 74th annual meeting, last weekend, at the Sheraton Hotel on Station Square.

Highlights of the business session included an address by outgoing president, Sam Minor, in which he listed the accomplishments of the Holstein Association during his term.

He cited as the most important of these "The emergence of a local initiative. That is the members, the breeders of the local clubs, at committee level, having a greater influence in the programs and direction of the Association."

Minor further explained that "I feel this is a direction in more organizations throughout the country. A planning from the bottom up, not the top down."

Recommending that the National and State Holstein Associations work together towards common goals, Minor explained this will strengthen both organizations, effectively utilizing the assets of both.

Concluding his comments, Minor told the audience he hoped they would interpret his questions and remarks as attempts at achieving the highest possible goals for the Registered Holstein.

It was announced that Thomas Kelly, Blair County had received unanimous nomination by Pennsylvania Holstein delegates to the candidacy for June election to a director seat on the National Holstein Board. This will give Pennsylvania a larger representation nationally.

The business meeting was concluded with the induction of the new state officers for the 1986 to 1988 term. Arthur Baxter from Stoneboro is the new president. Tim Merwarth, Easton, became the new vice president and Walter Wurster, Ottsville, was installed as the new treasurer.

At the awards luncheon, the Progressive Breeder Registry Award was given to: Jay and Mary Houser, 14 years; J. Harold Bare, two years; Kenneth and Jane Benner, two years; Lewis and Barb Berkley, two years; Thomas Boyer, two years; E.W. and J.C. Brake, two years; Delaware Valley College, 13 years; Joe Hartle, Jr., three years; Dale Hostetter and Sons, two years; Stephen Janos, two years; and Junge Farms, seven years.

Additional Progressive Breeder recipients were: Keystone Farms, 28 years; Nevin Mast, two years; Wayne Myers, two years; Richard Packard, 19 years; David Roth, two years; J. Ivan Smoker and Son, seven years; Willowland Farm, three years; Jefferson Yoder, 18 years; Clarence Beiler, 18 years; Raymond and Richard Cousen, one year; Harold Fabian, one year; Sinking Springs Farm, one year; Smyser Richlawn Farm, one year; Paul and Kathy King, eight years; Singing Brook Farm, eight years; J. William and Vera Schultz, six years; Marcove Farm, 16 years; Keuhn Brothers, two years; Richard and Charlotte Place, one year; Glenn Moyer, one year; Ralph and Thomas Thrower, one year; Keith Decker, three years; and North View Farms, four years.

The juniors also elected new officers for the coming year. They are: president, Walter Russell, Huntingdon County; vice president, Charles Seidel, Berks County; secretary, Irene Benner, Perry County; treasurer, Christy Harpster, Huntingdon County; and news reporter, Jenny Weimer, Adams County.

Sam Minor, retiring PHA president, turns the gavel over to the new president, Art Baxter.

Holstein breeder Tom Kelly of Blair County, received congratulations following his unanimous nomination by Pennsylvania Holstein delegates to the candidacy for June election to a director seat on the National Holstein board.

Sam Minor, right, accepts a special award on behalf of the Pa. Holstein Association from Robert Rugaber, Butler County Extension Agent, in appreciation for the Holstein Association's support of the national NACAA banquet held in Pennsylvania in 1985.

Left, Paul Corbin, Jefferson County; Jenny Weimer, Adams County; and Evelyn Moyer, Somerset County received, for their counties' Holstein clubs, the milk promotion award from James Harteis, committee chairman.

John and Judy Grice, Washington, co-chairman of the 1986 Convention, smile proudly at a job well done.

Rynd, Alsdorf join Hall of Fame

BY MARTHA J. GEHRINGER

PITTSBURGH — The distinguished Hall of Fame award this year went to two Crawford County breeders, Marion Alsdorf and Jack Rynd.

This award, the highlight of the banquet, was presented by Fred Strouse who described both as being "excellent across the board in character, personality, and intelligence."

Alsdorf, who recently served as the president of the Pennsylvania Holstein Assoc., operates a 120 registered Holstein milking herd with his two sons and son-in-law near Spartansburg.

He took over the family farm about 50 years ago. At that time he had a choice of either attending college or remaining on the home farm. If he had gone onto college the family farm probably would have been sold due to his father's failing health. Alsdorf chose the latter.

Over 30 Excellent cows and two Gold Medal Dams have been bred during the past 50 years by Alsdorf. In this time he has also had ten bulls go into A.I. service with his A-Jay prefix.

He bred and showed the grand champion at the state show in 1974 as well as the All Pennsylvania Cow and Produce in the same year.

Alsdorf describe receiving the award as an honor "and a humbling experience." He went on to say "I've had many priceless years with the Holstein Association... and feel that I've learned more than I've contributed."

Jack Rynd also described receiving the award as a humbling experience. He commented that "I've really got two families. The Holstein people are a wonderful group where I have a mass of friends."

Rynd beginnings in full time farming date back to 1950 when he bought the family farm. At that time the farm consisted of eight cows and 50 acres.

It has since grown to 550 acres and 130 cows. Rynd has also formed a partnership with three of his sons on their farm near Cochranton.

They have developed over 62 Very Good and 30 plus Excellent cows. Currently their rolling herd average is at 16,000 pounds of milk and 600 pounds of fat.

Last year Rynd was one of eight people from across the country chosen to be on the Dairy Task Force. This was a national board which attempted to develop an answer to the milk surplus. He has also served as president of the Farmers Union Milk Producers Cooperative for the past five years.

Rynd was instrumental in the planning and building of the Penn-State Ag Arena and has served on county and regional dairy promotion committees.

Always a supporter of 4-H and FFA, providing leadership, encouragement, and advice, he recently received a honorary Keystone Farmer degree from the local FFA chapter.

Portraits of Alsdorf and Rynd will join those of other state Holstein pioneers and leaders in the Hall of Fame gallery, located in the state Holstein Association at State College.

Bill Nichol, executive secretary, left congratulates Marion Alsdorf on being named to the Pa. Holstein Hall of Fame. With Alsdorf are his wife Maude and Art Baxter, president.

Lancaster Dairy Days set for March 4, 11

LANCASTER — The annual Lancaster County Dairy Days will be held March 4th and 11th at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center. The program starts at 10 a.m. and concludes at 3 p.m. Come early to enjoy the coffee, milk and donuts and to inspect the exhibits on display.

The first day's program will focus primarily on managing the farm as a business, adjusting to today's economy and feeding cows economically.

On the second day, March 11th, speakers will discuss alfalfa management, heifer management, producing and utilizing good quality forages, feeding and herd management concepts, and nutrition and reproduction. There will also be an opportunity for private applicators of pesticides to be recertified the second day.

Speakers include Penn State Extension specialists, Farm Credit personnel, veterinarians and farmer panelists.

The event is being conducted by the Penn State Cooperative Extension Service of Lancaster County Anyone interested in dairying is invited to attend. The Penn State Extension Service is an affirmative action equal opportunity educational institution.

The detailed agenda for both days is as follows:

March 4

10:00—Adjusting to a Market-Oriented Economy by H. Louis Moore, Penn State.

10:30—The Money Situation and Money Management by Donald Shiflet, Farm Credit.

11:45—Characteristics of Profitable Farms by Larry Jenkins, Penn State.

Huntingdon County farmers seek set-aside revisions

BY BETSY STITT

HUNTINGDON — A group of Huntingdon County farmers have joined forces to try to get USDA to make changes in the regulations for the grain set-aside program.

Led by Herman Espy, chairman of the Huntingdon County ASC Committee and a member of the county DHIA board of directors, the group is concerned because many of the county's farmers would not be eligible for the program under the department's current interpretation.

They've enlisted Congressman Bud Schuster in their effort, following a meeting here last week.

Current USDA regulations require that farmers establish a "base," using any of several different measures to prove their crop yields during the period 1981-1983. Those measures for proving late acreage reports include: sales receipts of grain sold, receipts from custom harvesting, acreage reports obtained and certified by state or local governments, or crop insurance reports.

Many Huntingdon County farmers may not be eligible for the program, says Espy, because they do not have any of those figures to verify their "base."

Espy says few farmers in the county have filed acreage reports because most of their grain was fed to livestock, and thus, there was no need to report the acreage or yield to federal authorities.

In addition, most area farmers used their own equipment to harvest their crops, and did not participate in crop insurance programs because of the low yields in the area.

As a result, they may not be eligible for payments that, for some, could total as much as $30,000.

Espy's group feels that counties throughout the state could lose as much as $500,000 to $1 million annually, if their farmers cannot establish a base.

The group proposes that USDA accept the following additional verification of the "base" amount:

- Seed receipts showing amount and type of seed purchased.
- Receipts for cleaning and treating of seed planted on the farm.
- Certification of three area farmers regarding the crop and number of acres planted.
- Aerial slides, if available, proving the crop's identities and boundaries.

Allowing these additional forms of verification, Espy said, would greatly increase participation in the program. In addition, he said, it might increase the participation in the herd buyout program, since dairymen who currently feed their grain to cows could have a crop-farming alternative with a guaranteed price.

"It would benefit everyone concerned," said Espy. "Not only farmers, but consumers as well. It would keep farmers in business and keep the price of food down for consumers."

Schuster pledged to pressure USDA for a review of the proposal. And Espy urged farmers throughout the region to join his campaign by writing their legislators.

The group has already met with some success in its efforts, Espy noted. Officials have approved haying and grazing on set-aside lands, he said, a decision which helps all concerned.

But he's still hoping for a ruling from USDA that would add additional verification procedures so farmers can establish a base.

Others participating in the group include Glenn Houck, Gordon Cox, John Lake and Harry Gensimore.

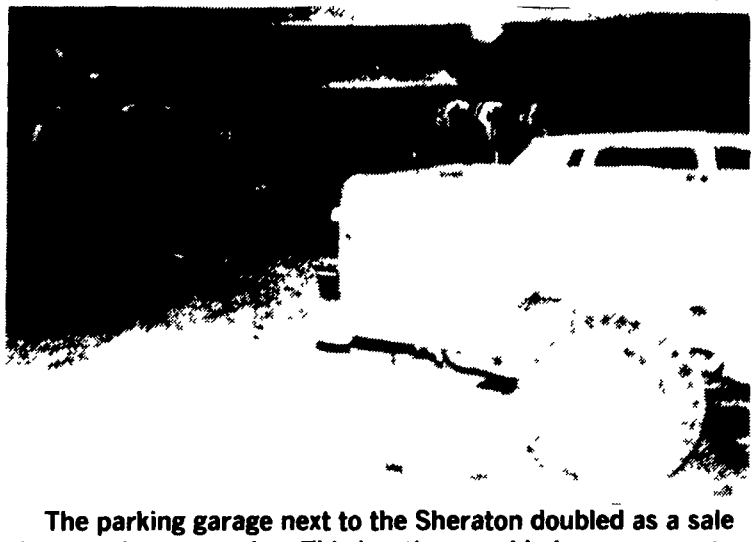
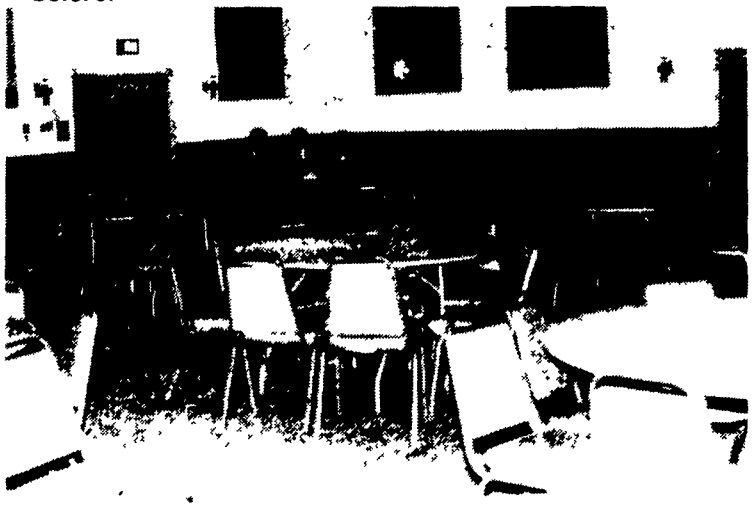
Behind the scenes at the Holstein Convention



The parking garage next to the Sheraton doubled as a sale barn at the convention. This location provided easy access to the ballroom and gave a large number of city people the chance to see a cow up close and personal. As one person was overheard to remark, "I've never been this close to a cow before."



The convention maybe over but the meetings go on as, left, Gail Carson, Ed Doeberiener, and Bob Freyermuth meet to solve problems facing the Holstein breed.

Calves, those perennial milk promotion crowd favorites, were part of the Holstein convention's mall display at the Station Square shops, adjacent to the host Sheraton Inn. Visitors Sarah Pennington, left, and Rachael Haggarty got their introduction to this irresistible black and white newborn from state dairy princess Beth Heald, and Sheila Biddle, Blair County princess.

The handmade quilt started the convention sale. This quilt sold to Harry Bachman for $575.

Marilyn Hilltop Hanover SS-ET tops convention sale

BY MARTHA J. GEHRINGER

PITTSBURGH — The cows in the ballroom at the Sheraton were dancing to the sounds of the auctioneer, William Kent, and Gayle Carson announcing the pedigrees, as the Pennsylvania Holstein Convention Sale got underway.

Marilyn Hilltop Hanover S S -ET received the top bid of the day, $9500, from Carl Spagnola, Pittsburgh. Spagnola is a home builder from Shaler and owns a restuarant in Station Square, the mall next to the Sheraton.

Spanola, who had been carefully looking the animal over all week in the Sheraton's parking garage turned sale barn, really wanted this "beauty" and plans to board her at a farm in Berlin, Pa.

Hawked as one of the greats of the breed, she was consigned by John C. Sites, Jr. and Hardy Shore from New York, N.Y.

Marilyn, is the result of the mating between S-W-D Valiant and Hillranch Fond Matt Jean-Twin, an EX-96 with a lifetime record of 226,478 pounds of milk a 4.7 test and 10,150 pounds of fat.

This top price was closely followed by that of Golden Circle Pete Magic, who sold for $9000 to Magic Partners of Tucson, Arizonia. Magic, consigned by Paul and Sharon Fox of Rockwood, has an index of $102, 3339M, and 148F. She sold with a guarantee of five transferable embryos and was bred on December 2, 1985 to S-W-D Valiant.

The third highest priced cow to be sold was Willsholm Rotate Kelda, for the price of $8700. She is the offspring of the high TPI bull, Arlinda Rotate and Landsdown Elevation Kate.

Kelda was consigned by North View Farm, Berlin, and was purchased by Michael LaPoe from Clare, Michigan. She was due to freshen two days after the sale with a Carlin-M Ivanhoe Bell calf.

The sale averaged a pleasing $3293 on 45 cows. Ken Raney, Director of Membership Services, acknowledging the prices were lower than last year, stated the committee was "well pleased with prices considering the times." The unofficial total for the sale reached $148,185.

The sale was managed by the Pennsylvania Holstein Association, State College. Sale committee chairmen were Dan and Cathy Will.

The Convention Sale which was well attended by Holstein enthusiasts, also attracted curious onlookers from the city of Pittsburgh. As one person estimated, as high as one quarter of the capacity crowd were gawkers. These people included the Pittsburgh media and intrigued city dwellers who didn't know what was going on, but loved the fuss made over "cows, of all things."

Marilyn Hilltop Hanover, S S-Ext topped the Pennsylvania Holstein Convention sale at $9,500. She was purchased by Carl Spagnolo, a restaurant owner from Pittsburgh.

The second highest animal at the convention sale was Golden Circle Pete Magic. She sold for $9,000 to Magic Partners from Tucson, Arizona.

Willsholm Rotate Kelda came in with the third highest bid of $8,700 from Michael J. Lapoe, Clare, Michigan.

Ayrshire Breeders Annual Meeting

LITITZ — The Pennsylvania Ayrshire Breeders Association will hold its Annual Dinner Meeting at the Grantville Holiday Inn on Mar. 15.

The program gets underway at 10:30 a.m., and will feature the election of association officers, a report on final plans for the National Ayrshire Convention to be held in Pennsylvania on Apr. 22 to 25, and various committee reports.

Cost for the luncheon will be $7.75, and reservations can be made by contacting Milt Brubaker, 595 Snyder Hill Rd., Lititz, Pa., 17543, phone: 717-626-5788. The deadline for signup is Mar. 11.

Meet Art Baxter, new president of the Pennsylvania Holstein Association

BY JOYCE BUPP
Staff Correspondent

STONEBORO — "I'm automatically a good boy because my father was good," teases Art Baxter, a grin tugging at the corners of his mouth and a twinkle in his eye.

Baxter, a registered Holstein breeder from Mercer County, is the Pennsylvania Holstein Association's new president, installed during the annual convention last week in Pittsburgh.

His tongue-in-cheek comment is a personal bit of sarcasm leveled at the hotly-debated "numbers game." These computer formulas that put a numeric genetic measure on cattle, based on their ancestry, are coming under increasing criticism from many registered breeders. While sire and dam information is weighted into the formula, critics argue that the animal's actual performance is neglected in valuing genetic merit

As president of the state's largest dairy cattle breed, Baxter has set two goals for his two-year term of office.

The first goal is to encourage and promote the re-evaluation of the indexing program within the Holstein industry.

It bothers Baxter that less than five percent of the breed now carries any amount of "numbers" value. He figures that the indexing trend is badly hurting the national association's pocketbook, too, with deficits now turning up after years of operation in the black.

"Why rush to register cattle if they have very little dollar value over commercial animals; why bother to keep the records?" laments the Mercer dairy leader.

Baxter wants to see a re-emphasis on classification, reflecting the need to give credit to cows that are capable and deserving of selection as bull mothers.

For his own herd, Baxter favors the longevity of animals that prove they can stay in the herd, producing and reproducing year after year.

It's a philosophy that has paid off for the Garden Acres herd. Rolling herd average on 40 head is over 20,000 with 759 fat. That kind of results has earned the Baxter herd the high milk herd award in Mercer County for 1981 through 1984, plus high protein awards in 1983 and 1984.

Baxter credits genetics, plus a good feeding program and what he might label his best asset, his wife Alice, whom her husband proudly calls "a good milker."

Type is highly respected here as well. Pedigrees in the herd trace eight and nine generations of Excellents, some with the first four dams over 20,000 milk, 900 fat, and 150,000 milk production lifetime.

"And not one has an index," he observes.

Garden Acres values the "good old cows that hang around long enough to see what their daughters will look like."

Young cows which start on the slow slide don't bother this veteran breeder. He figures a first lactation of 14-16,000 is a fair start, with a followup second lactation in the 18-20,000 pound range.

"Then, at four they can cut loose and hang in the 24-26,000 pound range for years; you don't burn out big strong cows," Baxter noted.

One example Baxter offers is a daughter of his own Garden Acres Trademark bull, milking since the first day of September and holding steady at 100 pounds of milk per day. And, he'll tell you she doesn't have an index.

Man of a thousand faces, newly installed Pennsylvania Holstein Association President, Art Baxter, lists two of his goals: to take a hard look at the current index program and rework or restructure it, and to put through a product supply management program.

Having made his feelings perfectly clear on the index-numbers issue, Baxter tackles his second goal as a Holstein state leader: a supply-management program. Baxter is ready to work very hard to encourage the organization of supply management, often simply labeled "quotas."

"If farmers are going to be able to be in the industry in five years - if families are to stay in business - then we must have supply mangement."

That could easily be established, adds Baxter, with quotas of 90 percent of a farm's production over a historic base period.

"A dairyman with a million pound base can make it with 50 head, each producing 20,000 pounds. His less efficient neighbor down the road might need 70 cows to attain the same total production. And with growth hormones coming, cow numbers might be cut to 30 for that level. I'm not afraid of isoacids and hormones if we can work within a supply management program," reflects the Holstein president.

"As it is now, we're just working harder to sell more for less money."

Supply management. And a rework of the index system. Art Baxter has given both ideas a great deal of thought.

"If we have those two things, the registered breeder will be here forever."

Merchandising Holstein Workshop slated

OXFORD — Learn 100 great ideas to promote and sell more Holsteins at the Holstein Investment Opportunities, Inc.'s workshop to be held at the Bird-In-Hand-Motel on March 20, 1986 from 8:45 to 4:15.

This workshop will review different factors of selling good Holstein cattle. Effective business, office, and advertising procedures will be learned. Speakers will present programs on photography, financing, and advertising.

It will be stimulating, goal oriented, practical, down-to-earth, fun and most useful in 1986.

The fee for this workshop is $50.00 per person paid in advance. Graduates of this program will receive a certificate and valuable coupon.

To sign-up and receive further information on this workshop send name, address, phone number, check and your best Holstein ad to Glenn Freese, 902 Forge Rd., Oxford, PA 19363, (215-932-9762).

a panel discussion with views from 4 authorities

BY JOYCE BUPP
Staff Correspondent

PITTSBURGH – Early birds at the Pennsylvania Holstein convention didn't get the worm - but they turned out in force to hear a panel of well-known industry representatives argue the hottest subject going in the breed business.

"Should We Play the "Numbers" Game?" was the question debated at the 7 a.m. Saturday session, drawing a roomful of interested listeners and some heated discussion.

At the heart of the issue are the cow indexing and sire summary computer numbers formulas. These computer-figured, numerically-based evaluations measure an animal's genetic potential.

Stirring up new murmurings by many breeders on the "numbers" issue is a recent national Holstein board ruling to utilize only one classification score in evaluating the daughters of a sire. The score used will the closest to 30-months of age, and not beyond 42 months, and will determine Predicted Difference in Type, or PDT. Previously, a cow's most recent classification was figured into sire proofs, changing the sire's proof if daughters changed in classification as they matured.

Those favoring the new rule say it will make all sire proofs more fair, since only data on cows basically the same age will be computed.

Protesters of the new rule say it ignores durability in cows and locks in a proof before the long-term performance of daughters can be fairly evaluated.

Panelists were Dr. Robert Everett, a geneticist at Cornell University; Dennis Wolff, Pen-Col Farms; Pete Blodgett, Landmark Genetics; and Donald Seipt, Keystone Farms. Ron Buffington, Holstein Investment Opportunities, moderated.

Long-time Holstein breeder Don Seipt admits they play the "numbers" game at their Easton farm, but dislikes it immensely.

After 30 years of breeding cattle that earned Keystone considerable industry respect and 28 Progressive Breeder awards, Seipt finds indexing demands a "radical departure" from his basic cattle-breeding beliefs.

About 12 years ago, Seipt responded to industry pressure to begin using higher Predicted Difference bulls of the time, in order to regain markets the farm was losing to higher indexed herds. Sires such as Elevation, Astronaut and Bookmaker - sires now lower in index favor - became familiar at Keystone.

Then, five years ago Keystone, with reluctance, went to total use of high PD bulls to meet merchandising demands.

"We were told that we didn't really have anything good or superior genetically; that it was all just good management. That was demoralizing and depressing. Now, we're starting to lose type. And those with numbers from the very beginning are still ahead."

"Numbers" indexing has resulted in showring competition being nothing more than an "ego trip" for exhibitors, Seipt figures, and gives no credit to longevity or durability in individuals. He further critized the decision to base sire proofs solely on first classification of daughters, and suggested the formula "protects the proof long enough to sell a lot of semen, and then "the bull turns out not to be the bull we thought we selected."

"The system doesn't wait for the bull's real impact," Seipt added, further leveling criticism at the unavailability of semen from certain sires just before sire proofs come out semi-annually.

"It's all great if you're in the semen business...or are selling embryos...or baby calves," flatly states Seipt.

Seipt says that while, in his opinion, indexes aren't all wrong if practically designed and kept in proper perspective, the current formulas result in "paper figures." That offers only part of the necessary information to successfully breed animals, he adds, and the use of the computer numbers is just a shortcut to real thinking and consideration in mating cattle.

Columbia Countain Dennis Wolff has become a recognized leader for his high indexed animals, and his experience and success in worldwide marketing of ET offspring and eggs.

Two herds are maintained at Pen-Col, near Millville, both run on the same DHIA testing program. Wolff's main herd includes one hundred head of "genetically superior" individuals, including sixty two-year-olds, and as he notes, "no row of good old cows." In the second herd of 45 head are lower producers, along with some recipient animals.

Wolff is quick to admit that his breeding philosophy has changed over the years to embrace the needs of the market.

"If that's in the minority of the breed, it eventually will not succeed," he projects.

Wolff also notes that he does not go to any great lengths to contact potential purchasers of his high indexed genetic offspring; buyers come seeking his merchandise. He openly acknowledges the two-herd arrangement, letting AI personnel and other potential customers evaluate for themselves what influence it might have on performance records.

High PD sires are selected at Pen-Col to continue development and enhancement of the high indexed individuals, along with functional type, Wolff elaborated later. He further feels that functional type and classification type are not parallel, and classification typing leans too heavily toward "showring" traits.

"I'd like to change the emphasis on mammary to center support and udder depth and see less criticism of foreudder attachment. Calving a cow at 1 year-9 months that milks 75 pounds is going to result in a bulging fore udder," Wolff explains.

S-W-D Valiant is still seeing heavy use in the Pen-Col mating program, along with some select young sires. Wolff first heavily weighs PD$ when making sire choices, followed by emphasis on type, test and protein.

Landmark Genetic's Pete Blodgett has been matching genetic traits and arranging bull mother contracting in the dairy industry for some twenty years.

He sums up his personal breeding philosophy as "don't stray too far from the middle of the road." Breeders, he says, should not "tie their wagon" to cow indexes.

Blodgett acknowledged the numbers controversy and its direct influence on marketing cattle, but noted that the breed will always need "free thinkers." These specialists will steer away from popular trends and breed to their own philosophies. And, such individualists lead to a pool of genetic variety, an alternative of genetics should marketing needs change down the road.

"A lot of badmouthing of the numbers game is caused by going to extremes," is how Blodgett sees the current spate of criticism of indexing.

He, too, was critical of the change in formulating PD type, through the use solely of first-time daughter classification.

Needs of the industry, Blodgett adds, are for females high in fat, protein and functional type traits. Just because an individual is low in index doesn't mean she is unable to transmit genetic value. In Blodgett's opinion, good breeding must combine "common sense" with all the available tools for selection toward improved type and production.

Dr. Robert Everett is a Cornell University geneticist, and a staunch defender of the indexing formula system. He reviewed the indexing program and related his beliefs on the correctness of the current computerized genetic measure methods.

One of Dr. Everett's concerns, however, is of pedigree slippage. Slippage depicts the ranking of animals higher than they genetically merit.

Part of that concern focuses on the relationship of "preferential treatment," or the extra or box-stall attention lavished on individuals within a herd, to enhance the animal's overall performance.

According to the geneticist, such preferential care could potentially influence a cow's production records by perhaps 2,000 pounds, or boost a pedigree index $22 above its actual true genetic numerical merit.

Embryo transfer sons may reflect this preferential treatment, warns Everett, and that could result in some ET sires considerably lower than non-ET sires in their true ability to transmit desirable breeding characteristics.

"The problem is educating people," is Dr. Everett's view of the criticism of the numbers debate.

He further predicts the possibility of commercial dairymen setting up separate genetic evaluation methods, if those currently in place do not meet their needs.

Moderator Ron Buffington kept the discussion, which included a host of questions, flowing at a lively rate, with the debate continuing around the participants even after the session adjourned.

He assured breeders - many of them visibly angry over the indexing trend - that the registered Holstein business encompasses a large breed, and not everyone has to play the same "game."

"No tool will replace all tools," concluded Buffington. "Each is a building block; and we need to not go to extremes."

"Just keep an eye on the market."

Dr. Robert Everett: "Preferential treatment of cows can influence a pedigree index."

Early-bird seminar panelists: Blodgett: "Don't stray too far from the middle of the road."

Don Seipt: "Indexes are great if you're in the semen business - selling calves - or embryos."

Dan Carr, left and helper, take care of restoring the ballroom to its former state by removing the sawdust.

The Scott Brothers, from New Florence, provided the entertainment for the Convention Banquet.

'Real thing' in horsepower of horses than rise on a tractor," he says. "That's the joy. Being close to nature and to God."

He finds he doesn't need to farm as many acres as a mechanized farmers because he doesn't have the overhead expenses. Kanagy feels 80 to 100 acres are ample while a farmer who has invested heavily in machinery needs to farm many more acres to make his payments.

"Raising colts, now, that's another bonus. These days you can't afford anything that can't reproduce. Like a tractor."

He has sold horses each year at the sale. This year, the horses he had consigned sold previously to the auction but he accompanied his brothers to Harrisburg, where they sold three horses. "Quality horses still bring the price," he notes, "if you have a good one. But the bottom has dropped out of the prices for cheaper ones."

He has observed if someone has the money to spend and needs a horse, the good money is there for the seller. He mentions the draft horse sale held in Columbus recently where one horse went for $8000. "That was the right kind, what they're looking for."

When Kanagy studies a draft horse, he looks for bone structure. "I like to see a nice, fine, sharp looking animal with substance that will last." He says he finds it easier to work a nice horse than a poor one and feels God created the good ones to work well and to enjoy."

Kanagy is also aware of the responsibilities of stewardhsip of the horses entrusted to him. "You should raise colts the way the Lord intended you to do. Give them proper care and feed. I don't like to misuse a horse." He continues to say a lot of Amish people work horses because they have to and this is bad for the horse.

"If you take care of the horse, he'll take care of you," he maintains. He also says horses enjoy going out and doing their work. "They have a sense of being justly treated."

He mentions another benefit to farming with horses. Kanagy feels there is a lot of tension and stress in farming with machinery that leaves you tired at the end of the day. But if you use horses, at the end of the day you have time and energy to reflect.

"Farm with horses and keep on a smaller scale," he says. "You may handle less money but you will come out ahead."

Farming, family and Belgians are important to Gail Biddle, too. She and her husband Lew own Oak Hall Farm in Boalsburg where their children Katie, Jennifer and Todd are the fifth generation of their family on the farm. Lew is also vice president of the Pennsylvania Draft Horse and Mule Association.

"We always liked draft horses," says Mrs. Biddle. She says while she and her husband were farm raised and had light horses as 4-H projects, they were never around draft horses. In 1979 they bought their first Belgian and they now have 16 registered Belgians.

"We want to try to raise the best Belgians we can," she states. "And we want to do more showing."

If you don't think of the Motor City as a mecca for draft horses, talk to Mrs. Biddle. She is quick to assure you the Great Lakes International Show in Detroit is one of the most fabulous draft horse shows around. Taking show sto to the Detroit show and to t American Belgian Show Columbus, Ohio, are two of t family's goals.

But Oak Hall Belgians work for living, too. Lew Biddle uses h horses to rake hay and straw, ha manure and plant some cro "We enjoy working and showi our horses as a family," says M Biddle.

"This is a total family volvement. We hope we c preserve our family heritage the farm."

Alfalfa growers demand the best.

"We want quality and consistency," says Dorsey Owings of Owings And Sons, Inc., alfalfa dehydrator and cuber, located on Maryland's Eastern Shore at Millington. "We're cubing alfalfa here in the East and putting some of the best alfalfa in cubes you'll find anywhere in the United States. I know, because I bought Western cubes and compared 'em."

Dorsey and his crew start with 80 percent moisture alfalfa right after cutting and wilt it down to the 50 percent range in the field. Then the crew brings the crop into the dehydrator where it is dried to about 10 percent moisture. The cuber follows by compressing it into dense chunks about an inch square for livestock feed. Horse owners are his biggest customers of the bright green chunks at present. But the advantages of his sweet smelling bites may make others take a hard look at cubes.

"Our cubes consistently test over 20 percent protein because we don't have to rely on the weather like you do with baled alfalfa," Dorsey notes. "On the shore, the humid air doesn't favor baling hay much of the time. Besides, cubes take half the storage space of hay, or less."

Dorsey Owings direct seeded 120 acres of alfalfa last year to supply his new facility with high quality alfalfa. He has made a lot of important decisions while getting started in his new venture. But, the best may be when he decided to plant Cimarron.

"Seedway recommends Nestor Tetraploid Perennial Ryegrass for Growers Using Alfalfa-Ryegrass Mixtures."

Maple Sugar Festival set

WEST CHESTER – Learn the techniques of backyard maple sugaring at Chester County's Hibernia Park during the sixth annual Maple Sugar Festival on Saturday, March 8 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Maple syrup will be made from tree sap for interested onlookers, and tree identification and tapping demonstrations will take place. Those who are interested in the maple sugaring process and want to try it at home are welcome to attend. Take home brochures will outline the procedures step by step. Equipment catalogs and collections of recipes substituting maple syrup for sugar will be distributed also.

A special festival breakfast will be served all day, beginning at 9:00 a.m. Pancakes, sausage, orange juice, and a choice of coffee or cocoa will be available for $2.50; pancakes, orange juice, coffee, or cocoa will cost $2.00; extra orange juice, coffee, or cocoa will be $.40 each. A live bluegrass band will entertain under the pavilion where the breakfast is served.

Pure Pennsylvania maple syrup will be sold in various size containers, by the ½ gallon, quart, pint, ½ pint, and ¼ pint, along with maple cream and bags of maple candy. Tree taps will be available for purchase by those who would like to tap their own tree. Visitors may also tour historic Hibernia Mansion, or take a hayride through the park meadows and woodlands.

Hibernia Park is located approximately four miles north of Coatesville in central Chester County. From the Route 30 bypass, follow Route 82 north two miles, turn left on Cedar Knoll Road and travel one and one quarter miles to the park entrance on the left. Admission is $1.00 per car. The rain date is Saturday, March 22. For more information, call the Hibernia Park office at (215)384-0290.

Maryland Holstein Convention recognizes breeders

BY MARTHA J. GEHRINGER

HAGERSTOWN, Md. — Maryland Holstein breeders met last weekend, for their annual state convention, hosted at the Ramada Inn, Hagerstown.

Highlights of the business meeting included the election of new state officers and directors. Results of this election are: president, Joseph Schwartzbeck, Union Bridge; vice president, Ed Stanfield, Randalltown; and secretary-treasurer, John Morris, Frederick.

Directors receiving the nod for three years include: Donald Crother, Rising Sun; Michael Haines, Taneytown; Jeffrey Moore, Centreville; Curtis Day, Damascus; and John Schenning, Bel Air.

The 1985 Maryland Holstein Production Awards were also given out at this time. Robert Meredith, Federalsburg, received the award for the high record for a two year old in 305 days or less, with the record of 28,065 pounds FCM.

The junior award in this category went to Michael Iager, Fulton, with the record of 23,126 pounds FCM.

Marlin Hoff, New Windsor, was the recipient of the award in the three-year-old class with a production of 31,513 pounds FCM. The junior winner was Ian Hoff, New Windsor, and the record of 23,840 pounds FCM.

Recognized in the four-year-old group was Marlin Hoff, with the production 31,707 pounds of FCM. Richard Bender, Accident, was the junior receiving this honor with the record of 26,859 pounds FCM.

The category of five to ten year old went to Robert Meredith, and the record of 37,027 FCM. The junior division five-year-old-award went to Matthew Hoff, New Windsor, and the production of 31,944 pounds FCM. The junior winner in the six year and over group was O. Clay Smith, Jefferson, and the record of 31,944 pounds FCM.

McGuire Brother, Kenndyville took the award for the 10 years and over class with the record, 27,317 pounds FCM.

Robert Meredith was the recipient of the award for the owner of the high lactation herd 90 cows and under for milk in both the DHIR and DHI categories.

The DHIR winner of this award in the over 90 cow herd was Marlin Hoff with the DHI award going to Maple Lawn Farms, Fulton.

Coldsprings Star Bride and her production of 256,670 pounds of milk garnered the high lifetime award for Marlin Hoff. The junior winner in this category was Matthew Hoff and his cow, Kit-Way Coldsprings Jaki-Twin and her production of 151,440 pounds of milk.

Oren Bender, Accident and his cow, Cove Run W. F. Goldie Gem took the high protein award with the record, 1,058 pounds protein.

The high lifetime production of fat recognition went to Fireydale Sunshine Maud Betty with the record, 10,180 pounds of fat. She is owned by the Firey Brothers, Clear Spring.

Progressive Breeder Award recipients were: Kingstead Farm, 31 years; C. Renn Remsburg and Son, 24 years; Maple Lawn Farms, Inc. owned by Ellsworth Iager and Sons, 19 years; Marlin Hoff, five years; Schenning Brothers, five years; Carl Bender, three years; Del Myr Farm owned by Roger and Jeff Myers, three years; Donald Wilcom, three years; Oren Bender, two years; Harmony Farm owned by Frank and Barbara Covey, two years; Dan Hollingsworth, III, one year; Marlin and Eva Martin, one year; Warner Brothers of Frederick County, one year; and David Yoder, one year.

Dr. Francis H. Fox, DVM, Cornell University, spoke at the convention on the topic, Johne's Disease. Dr. Fox admitted this is a problem and an embarrassment for the Vet Industry since diagnosis takes several months.

Presently, intense research money for this disease is not available since it is not a specific problem for humans such as TB is.

Dr. Fox urged breeders to vaccinate for it and to remove calves from their mothers if diarrhea develops. He concluded by stating that current research is hopeful of finding an effective treatment in the near future.

The Maryland Holstein Association annually awards scholarships at its convention. This year two new $500 Scholarships to the University of Maryland Institute of Applied Ag were awarded. The recipients were Becky Long, Thurmont and Bill Allen, Jefferson.

Two $500 Scholarships were given to the University of Maryland College of Ag to Steve Hockman, Hagerstown and Greg Wiles, Williamsport.

Also receiving scholarships were Lisa Firey, Eric Knutsen, James Swift, Jedonne Swift, William Swift and Kelly Shaw.

The Maryland Convention Sale sold 51 head with a sale average of $2072. The top animal sold was Coldspring Jetson Pica ET for $8500 to Pablo Echevarria, Tunkhannock, Pa. Pica was consigned by Marlin Hoff, New Windsor who retained half interest.

The sale was managed by Remsburg Sales Service.

Raising farm animals on limited acreage

DOYLESTOWN — Interested in raising animals on a limited amount of acreage? Then attendance at the Southeast Pennsylvania Livestock Day is mandatory for you.

This program will include a discussion on tax considerations for the small farm and an overview of some of the species that are more adaptable to small farm situations.

Also covered in the day's program is information on the six different species which can be raised on limited acreage. Each session will cover nutrition, facilities, health, labor, marketing, general management and other important topics related to raising the various species.

Delaware Valley College is the site for this program. It is located on Route 202 in Doylestown just off the Route 611 bypass. Speakers for the day include extension agents from Bucks, Lehigh, Chester, Berks, and Montgomery Counties Personnel from Delaware Valley College will also be included in the day's program.

A registration fee of $10 for adults and $5 for students is being charged. Late registration will be accepted at the door but will not include lunch.

UDIA annual meeting slated for Columbus

COLUMBUS, OH — The Annual Meeting of United Dairy Industry Associaiton (UDIA) scheduled for the Hyatt Regency Columbus at Ohio Center, March 25-26, 1986, will include format innovations requested by the membership.

General Session will begin at 8:30 a.m. on March 25. Using the theme, "UDIA Better Than The Best," UDIA delegates will have increased participation through a new resolution process.

Members of UDIA are asked to submit resolutions concerning association policy to the Executive Committee of the Board of Directors by March 1. This committee will forward appropriate resolutions to the Board of Directors.

All resolutions must come from association members, be in writing, and pertain to the purpose of the association, as spelled out in the Bylaws. The resolutions will be presented to the House of Delegates on the first day of General Session. Action on these resolutions will occur the following day.

Any resolutions presented after the March 1 deadline must be presented to the Resolutions Committee at a meeting to be held on March 25. The location and time of such meeting will be posted at the Annual Meeting registration area.

Another innovation is the involvement of the chairman of each of UDIA's operating arms, American Dairy Association, Dairy Research Inc., and National Dairy Council, in their respective seminars. Each of the seminars will have improved presentation formats that utilize audiovisual support.

Anita L. Owen, president of the American Dietetic Association, will address the delegates during their Tuesday luncheon. Her topic is "Launching New Markets With Nutrition Education."

On March 26, John Bowen, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of D'Arcy Masius Benton & Bowles Inc. will sp[illegible] to the General Session assembly. His speech is entitled, "Advertising· Delivering on the Promise."

The UDIA Service Recognition Banquet to be held Tuesday evening, will combine the service pin awards presentation with entertainment by the Spurrlows. This 11-member group has appeared in command performances at the White House and on television with Bob Hope, Merv Griffin, and Johnny Carson.

The UDIA Annual Meeting is scheduled to end at 2:30 p.m., March 26, following a concluding luncheon and speaker. A ladies program, delegates' evening tour, and a Welcome to Columbus cheese and wine reception, hosted by Mid East UDIA, are also part of the schedule of events.

Ag Chairman says budget 'not a realistic answer'

WASHINGTON — Chairman Kika de la Garza, of the House Agriculture Committee said Wednesday the sections of President Reagan's budget proposals dealing with agriculture and related issues are "not a realistic answer" to current problems.

Following is the text of de la Garza's comment:

"We will need to study this budget line by line before I can talk in detail about many of the issues involved. But in general, this proposal is not a realistic answer at a time when economic distress in some farming areas is the most serious in half a century.

"At a time when we are trying to get farm exports up so we can reduce surpluses and improve farm prices, this budget proposes drastic cuts in the farm export credits provided by the 1985 farm bill. The estimates in the budget for farm price support programs do not reflect what might happen to 1987 crop programs if there is a Gramm-Rudman sequestration order cutting the fiscal 1987 budget.

"At a time when farmers are struggling to stay afloat, it proposes to phase out federal assistance for crop insurance.

"At a time when the President says he does not want to raise taxes, this budget has hidden tax increases such as a proposal to make meat and poultry processors — and this probably means, eventually, consumers — pay the cost of inspecting meat and poultry for wholesomeness.

"At a time when many of our rural communities are struggling to stay afloat, the budget proposes what appears to be a move to eliminate any federal involvement in rural areas by abolishing a number of rural development programs. Those of us in rural areas are a part of this great country, just as the urban areas are, and it is unfair to single our programs out this way.

"Of course we have to deal with the deficit and of course agriculture has to be a part of whatever package Congress develops. I will soon be announcing selection of an ad hoc budget subcommittee to begin work on our Committee recommendations on these issues, and I believe we can come up with a more sensible and responsible package than the administration sent us."

W-L Alfalfas lead the field in Pennsylvania Growers Competition.

"W-L is definitely a high quality seed The varieties are dependable, the crop is more persistent, and I think the hay quality is better Last year I took four cuttings, and the fourth looked just like the first."

'Future' conference to focus on ag issues

UNIVERSITY PARK — "Pennsylvania agriculture is at a crossroads, and now is the time for the leadership to talk about the issues," says Art Davis, chairman of the Future of Agriculture in Pennsylvania Conference.

For more than a year Penn State and its 65-member Ag Advisory Council have been planning the conference, scheduled for March 19 and 20, 1986 at the Holiday Inn — Center City, Harrisburg.

"The decisions we make and the actions we take now will affect Pennsylvania agriculture well into the next century," says Davis, who currently occupies the Goddard Chair in Forest Resources at Penn State. Davis adds that the conference will be taking a hard look at the agricultural industry as well as at changing trends in rural Pennsylvania.

Community leaders, business leaders, bankers and educators, as well as representatives of industry and the major Pennsylvania agricultural production and commodity groups should plan to attend.

"With Davis's leadership we have been fortunate in securing "top notch national speakers to address major issues of broad concern, such as able panelists to consider particular prospects for Pennsylvania agriculture," says Penn State President Dr. Bryce Jordan.

"This is the beginning of a process, a set of continuing activities through which the University, the state, and others can help create a better future for agriculture and rural life in Pennsylvania," adds Jordan, who will chair the first day's activities.

For more information about the conference contact: Dr. W. Wayne Hinish, Acting Dean, College of Agriculture, 201 Ag Administration Building, University Park, PA 16802 or call (814) 865-2542.

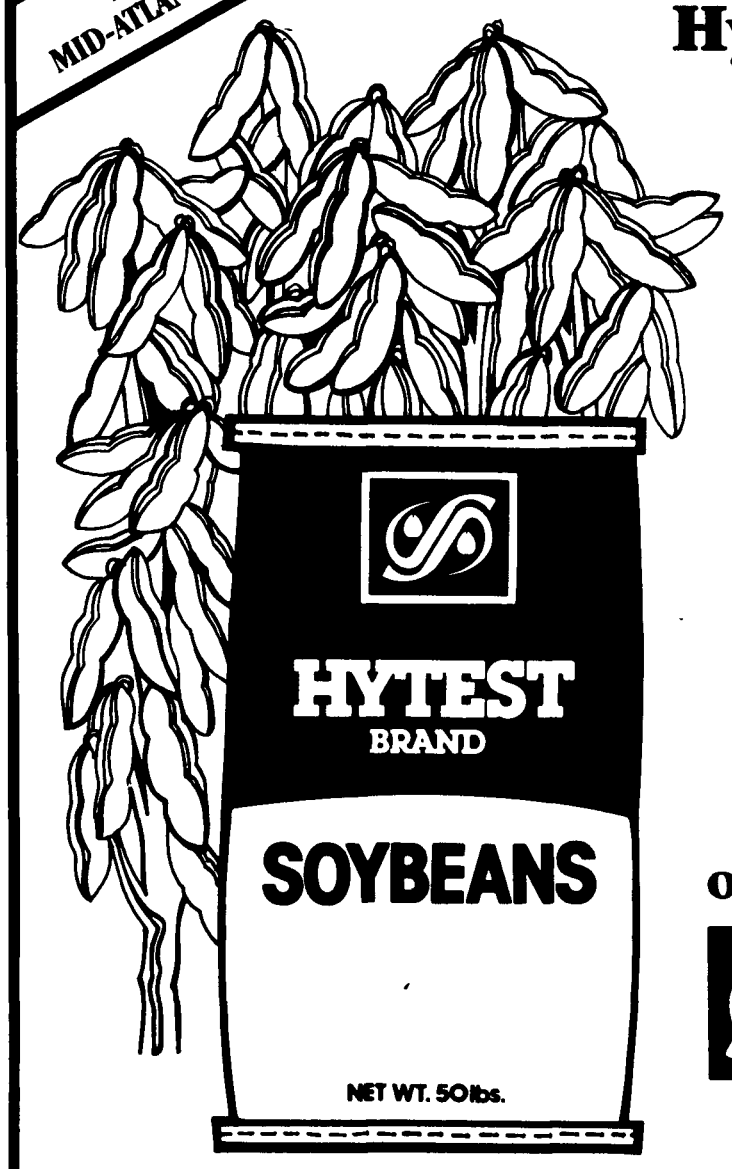
IMPORTANT NEWS FOR MID-ATLANTIC SOYBEAN GROWERS



Three Reasons Mid-Atlantic Soybean Growers Are Planting More Hytest Brand Varieties for 1986

When you know beans you know there are important features that can make a difference in yield and profit. Hytest Falcon, Classic II and VR 3393 varieties have what it takes to make that difference.

- Triple Tested for Germination, Cold Vigor and freedom from Mechanical Damage.
- Full Maturity Range makes them an excellent choice for Eastern growers like you.
- Performance Proven in soils like yours. Test results are the proof of the profit, and we have the results!

Before you select the beans for your 1986 planting, see your Stanford dealer for all the facts on the Hytest brand varieties that can put you in the know for 1986

The Proof is in Performance

Here are the 1985 results of Mid-Atlantic Hytest tests. You'll see why more Mid-Atlantic growers are making the move to Stanford Seeds to help improve their profits.

Increasing production by controlling mastitis

BY ROBIN PHILLIPS
Staff Correspondent

LEESPORT — "A lot of dairy farmers could increase their production if they would understand the mammary system and treat it accordingly," stated Clyde Myers, Berks County Agent, as he began the program at the Southeast Pennsylvania Extension, "Mastitis and Milking Equipment Update" meeting last week.

The lineup of experts at the seminar attempted to enhance such an understanding by indepth discussions on mastitis. Going beyond merely stressing the need to teat dip and dry treat, the topics of the meeting dealt with exotic forms of mastitis, milking equipment problems and research, milk recording devices, teat dips and dry cow treatments, somatic cell counts, and new developments in milking equipment.

On hand to provide a very informative presentation and field many questions throughout the day were Dr. Larry Hutchinson, PSU Extension veterinarian, and Steve Spencer, PSU Extension dairy specialist.

The understanding of somatic cell counts and the use of that knowledge was stressed throughout the day. The somatic cell count (SCC), a measurement of the leukocytes fighting infection in the cow's udder and present in a milk sample, is provided to participating dairymen on their monthly DHIA reports. The coded results on each cow can give advance notice to a dairyman of subclinical mastitis or an oncoming infection.

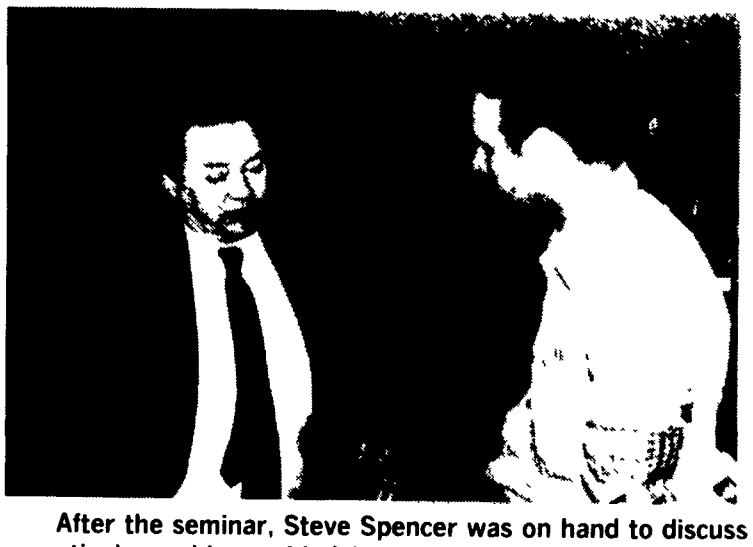
At a "code 3" or a measurement of 141,000 SCC, subclinical mastitis is present in the udder, and production loss begins. By a code of "5" or SCC of 500,000, clinical infection is obvious and the loss in production is critical.

It is estimated that $75.00 to $160.00 per cow/per year is lost to high SCC or mastitis, and as much as one-half of all dairy cows may be infected in two quarters. It has also been shown that excessive somatic cell levels in milk indicate up to a 25% loss of production potential for the the herd.

Myers recommended looking at the herd's trends over a year's time. By screening the SCC each month and possibly charting a cross section of the herd, trends in codes may be seen to lead to a problem within the herd. According to these trends, stated Myers, a dairyman can determine if housing problems, milking system performance, or spreading mastitis is in his herd and costing him daily and substantial losses.

High somatic cell counts in first-calf heifers when they freshen could be a sign of a sucking problem in group pens, or a housing problem with younger stock. Older cows developing high counts could be spreading mastitis within the herd. If a certain time of the year seems to be leading to higher SCC in the herd, poor housing or muddy conditions could be the source of the problem.

A thorough screening of the SCC and the use of the CMT (California Mastitis Test) to determine which quarters are infected can help the dairyman control the problem in his herd by leading him to where the source of the problem may be, Myers continued. Fewer herd replacements are necessary when mastitis is controlled.



After the seminar, Steve Spencer was on hand to discuss particular problems with dairymen.

Dr. Larry Hutchinson discussed "The Environment and Mastitis." "A cow can repair (the udder) somewhat after the infection period," Hutchinson began, "but she can never grow new milk secretory cells where there is scar tissue." A high SCC indicates that the milk secretory tissue is being replaced with scar tissue, according to Hutchinson. Dairymen need to initiate control of new infections.

Hutchinson observed that the majority of new infections occur in the two weeks following drying off and then again right before and after freshening. They can be defined as either contagious organisms or enviromental organisms, he explained. Contagious organisms are the Strep Ag, Staph Aureous, and Strep Non-Ag that live inside the udder and are spread from cow to cow during the milking process.

Environmental organisms are the coliforms that can live in stalls, mud, water, ponds, and are present in any dirty environment. Hutchinson explained that the environmental organisms can be treated in an udder and when cleared up the udder is rid of them. However, with the contagious organisms the udder always carries them and a chronic cow must usually be culled to prevent spreading within the herd.

Hutchinson went on to discuss the different methods and potential for control of the various types of mastitis.

"I recommend dry treating every cow, every quarter," Hutchinson stated. Dry treatment works against the contagious organisms and is designed to prevent a cow from becoming infected during her dry period. Although some herds may experience resistance problems, Hutchinson added, the major products on the market today will work in 90% of the herds.

Teat dipping kills the bacteria left on the end of the teat or on the milk drop on the teat after milking. This practice also works on the contagious organisms in the herd. "It's very possible by using teat dipping, of getting the contagious bacteria down in your herd up to 70% over a number of years," Hutchinson stated.

The better teat dips, he advised, are the 1% iodine teat dips and those containing chlorohexidine in water of glycerine. It is not necessary to change teat dips if the dip seems to be working in the herd and a good teat dip will not carry infection from quarter to quarter, Hutchinson added. He also stated that Chlorox was a good product to use but not approved for this use. A four percent dilution is needed.

In choosing a product, Hutchinson advised selection on the amount of information and research given on a specific product. Regarding cold weather and teat dipping, Hutchinson advised parlor and freestall situations to cease dipping when temperatures drop below 20 degrees, but to resume again as soon as possible. Barrier teat dips tend to be more effective on environment organisms, but not as effective on contagious organisms.

Clean dry udders and clean stall beds reduce the amount of environment organisms infecting the udder. Hutchinson added that the type of bedding used does make a big difference in controlling mastitis and is especially important in hot weather conditioins. Hydrated lime can also be used in stalls to dry them out somewhat, Hutchinson added, but too much of the lime in wet conditions can lead to chapping and burning the teat ends.

Recent research has shown that backflushing does not control mastitis significantly, although it has been shown to flush out the mycoplasma organisms prevalent in only a few herds. Pre-dipping cows before milking is also another new practice with few merits. It does have some advantage in killing environment organisms but is known to increase the iodine levels in milk.

Intramammary devices are also gaining some interest as the research progresses. Not on the market yet, the IMD's elevates the SCC and has some effect in controlling the environment organisms.

"The ultimate way of getting rid of mastitis," according to Hutchinson, "is culling". This method will free the herd form Strep Ag, he continued. With Strep Ag Staph, "once they get in the udder, they stay in the udder, always shed and spread around," Hutchinson explained.

Coliform or environment organisms can be cured in the udder, but will stay in the surroundings. "Once you're free of Strep Ag, you're always free unless you buy a cow with it in her udder," Hutchinson repeated. Vaccinations for the Staph bacteria have also been found to not do much good, according to Hutchinson. The vaccinations cannot get the immunity levels in the milk in high enough levels.

Hutchinson recommended taking a milk sample and saving it for a culture at the onset of any clinical mastitis. If the initial treatment that a dairyman tries first does not work, a culture can be done and any antibiotic can be used that will work on that particular mastitis organism. Cultures can not be done on milk that has been treated. It is important to take a milk sample before treating the mastitis.

The different types of exotic and coliform mastitis that Hutchinson discussed were: Klebsiella, Pseudomonas, Serratia, Prototheca, and Mycoplasma. The coliform mastitis grows in manure and contaminated environments and is resistant to many common antibiotics and hard to treat.

These types of mastitis produce toxins in the cow who experiences fever of 105 degrees plus, loss of appetite, and is similar to a milk fever cow. The toxins poison the whole system and can kill the cow. Hutchinson recommended initiating treatment with aspirin or antihistamines to bring the temperature down.

Frequent strippings of the infected quarter will help to rid the udder of toxins. He advised using broad spectrum antibiotics in the vein and then working with the veterinarian for an effective antibiotic to use in the udder.

The Pseudominas organisms are more common in parlors since they grow in water systems. These bacteria also have a tolerance for iodine.

The Serratia organisms are found in contaminated bottles. They are not treatable. Some Serratia organisms have been found in some contaminated teat dips, Hutchinson stated.

The Prototheca organisms also do not respond to antibiotics and have been found in Furacin and water bottles. It is a type of algae and needs a moist growing medium.

The Mycroplasma organisms are contagious types of bacteria that are spread from cow to cow. It does not respond to treatment and usually affects two to four quarters with a hardening of the udder.

"The only way to find out what is in your herd is to culture," Hutchinson encouraged farmers. "

Inter-State District 7 honors members

Dairy Marketing

MOUNT JOY — Two Lancaster County dairy farm families were recognized for 25 years of membership with Inter-State Milk Producers Cooperative at the annual District 7 dinner.

Darrel E. and Natalie M. Witmer, Manheim and the Burkholder Brothers of Lititz accepted placques and certificates recognizing their families for 25 years of service to Inter-State. Also honored was the Wil-Am Dairy and Poultry Farm for receiving quality premiums for the entire year.

Robert Dever, assistant general manager for Inter-State reviewed the cooperative's goals for 1986 and briefly discussed the dairy provisions of the 1985 Farm Bill.

Dever noted that in 1985 Abbots dairy went bankrupt owing Inter-State about $2.5 million, which was about 25 percent of their net worth at the time. He went onto explain that Inter-State's producers were not assessed for this due to Inter-States strong financial position.

Dever feels optimistic about the future of the dairy industry since new money is coming in that had not been previously associated with dairy.

Explaining that Holly Milk is an integral part of their system, Dever said it was decided not to sell the plant. Presently it is used to process milk and gives them a place to store it on weekends and holidays.The. capital retained for Holly Milk will begin to revolve in February 1988 he also noted.

Dever closed by saying "The next 12 to 18 months will be difficult but the long run looks positive."

Andrew Marvin, fieldman for Inter-State, reminded the group of the change in the allowable leucocyte level. This level will change from 1.5 million to 1 million on July 1, 1986. He also noted that Inter-State has prepared a booklet, which each member will get, on how to improve the quality of milk and become eligible for the 7 cent per hundredweight premium.

Elections were held for each of the locals in this district. The Donegal local elected Luke Brubaker, president; Marvin Nissley, vice president, and Henry Shellenberger, secretary-treasurer. Stephen Hershey and Harold Shellenberger were elected as delegates, and Elvin Brenneman and Paul Sauder were voted as their alternates. James Brubaker was elected to the hauling committee.

The Lititz locals election results are as follows: president, D. David Martin; vice president, Lynn Royer; secretary-treasurer, Gerald Martin; delegates, Galen Crouse and Dale Hershey; alternates, Raymond Burkholder and Richard Kreider; and hauling committee, Ray Bollinger.

The third local, Lebanon County, election results are as follow: president, Arthur E. Brandt; vice president, Howard Kopp; delegate, J. Calvin Zimmerman; alternate, Dale Kennedy; and hauling committee, James Noll.

Janae Martin, Lancaster County Dairy Princess, congratulates Wayne and Joanne Erb on receiving quality premiums for the entire year.

Receiving recognition for 25 year membership was, left, Jerry and James Burkholder, and Darrel and Natalie Witmer.

The Advantages Of The Longer Lasting Herbicide Are Beginning To Sink In.

When you've got a lot of trash sitting on your field, you need a herbicide strong enough to fight its way through. Like Dual.

Conservation tillage demands Dual.

No herbicide fits the requirements of conservation tillage like Dual.

Dual's more active chemistry allows it to sit on the trash for weeks waiting for rain, without losing effectiveness. And when rain does come, Dual needs very little of it to wash off trash and activate, because it's highly soluble.

Concentrated to work harder, last longer.

Dual is concentrated to get into the soil and stay put. Even after heavy rainfall, it won't leach out. Instead, it stays close to the surface where it's most effective against germinating weeds and grasses. So your crop will have less competition for water and nutrients during the important early growth stage.

And Dual breaks down more slowly so it lasts two to four weeks longer than other herbicides. It stops the late germinating weeds and grasses that occur in the cooler soils under conservation tillage trash.

These times demand low cost per acre.

Because Dual is concentrated, you can apply it at low pint rates, not quarts like other herbicides And it's versatile enough to be used on corn and soybeans, or to be incorporated or applied over-the-top at the same low rate In short, no herbicide offers you more performance and versatility for the money in conservation tillage. So try the one whose advantages are sinking in on more and more farms. Dual from Ciba-Geigy

The Dairy Business

By Newton Bair

There is a running argument among farm folks about whether the Federal Government should be involved in Agriculture. Most of the arguments are inspired more by the heat of the controversy than by the light of reason.

Whether we like it or not, Uncle Sam has been looking over our shoulder, setting supports under our pay check, playing banker when money is tight, and pulling gentle strings on many of our actions. And this has been going on for a long time.

We only become conscious of the strings when they begin to tighten and restrict our private decisions. Or when the support begins to sag. Or the easy money for loans begins to tighten up. Then the heat starts to build, and the light of reason is harder to keep shining.

The trouble is, if we do not have some interference and guidance from the government we begin to complain that "they" should do "something." "They" turns out to be the Congress, and "something" is whatever seems to be expedient at the time.

It's never an ideal solution for everyone, and often only a temporary solution that gets more complicated as time goes on. The support price for milk is an ideal example.

If we want to be completely honest, the dairy industry is still the most highly favored of all farm enterprises, because a producer is guaranteed a price that makes it attractive to milk cows for a living.

If it were not so we wouldn't be faced with the tremendous national surplus of milk. None of the alternatives to dairying are nearly as attractive because they are not as profitable. It is only possible because of the support of the Government.

If the high support price for milk has produced the surplus that the government is now buying, the only solution is to lower the support price (which creates immediate problems for heavily leveraged dairymen), or to attempt some other drastic and highly unpopular system like the herd buyout program.

It is pretty hard to believe that the "Whole herd buyout" program will succeed here in the Northeastern U.S. The results of the bidding and participation in the program are not published yet, so all we can hope for is that the real trouble spots like the far West and the North Central areas have cooperated to the fullest to reduce their herds.

We don't seem to have as big a surplus here in Pennsylvania, if the competition between dairies for milk and markets is any indication. I only hope that those who have submitted a bid for a whole herd sellout made their bid high enough to cover their expenses for the next five years.

Whether we like it or not, the Federal government will be involved in some way with how we run our business. Despite all the talk about "free markets," meaning no controls on production or prices, I have talked to no one who truly believes that we could operate without some control.

If global markets are the issue, we need the functions of Federal involvement. It's pretty hard to cope with foreign trade as individual producers. Even when we concentrate on our domestic markets there will be some controls, regulations, and supports necessary.

The only alternative to Government involvement in Agriculture as I see it, is complete organization within our own industry. We have too many different farm organizations, espousing too many divergent ideas.

If Agricultural leadership could get together, consolidate their ideas into a workable plan to control our own production, markets, and prices, maybe we could do without government intervention. Until that happens, we'll have to put up with whatever Washington hands us.

WHAT'S a Puma?

It's a STEIGER

And it's here now

The Puma 1000 is a Steiger that makes a dramatic break with tradition, but still preserves the best of what the Steiger name stands for: Comfort, Reliability and Power. But it has an adaptability that makes Puma the solution to just about every farmer's problem. It has a steerable front axle that's ideal for row crops, because you can make minor steering adjustments in the rows and still articulate at the end of the field for tight turns The Puma preserves the best of the Steiger tradition and still takes full advantage of the latest tractor technology. With all that Steiger is famous for, the Puma 1000 shouldn't be a surprise

Vegetable growers told to follow consumer tastes

BY JOYCE BUPP
Staff Correspondent

YORK – Consumer eating habits are undoubtedly changing. And few segments of agriculture are in a better position to benefit from that trend than the area's vegetable growers.

That was the general message presented by several Penn State extension speakers during the February 19 York-Lancaster vegetable growers meeting, held at Rutter's Restaurant.

Keeping up with consumer preferences means planting the latest, improved varieties for maximum yield, appearance and taste. According to extension horticulturist Dr. Pete Ferretti, recent changes in the Plant Varieties Protection Act have sent the horticulture industry full speed ahead in the development of new varieties.

He further predicted that if promised genetic engineering developments come about as scientists expect, unbelievable strides in the plant industry are not far in the future.

Peppers are among vegetables seeing the most rapidly growing consumer demand. Based on University trials, Ferretti recommends a new bell type, dubbed Gator Bell, which matures two to three days ahead of others. Additional popular varieties include Bell Boy, Lady Bell and Green Boy.

A new blocky yellow, Marengo, shows considerable promise. Yellow peppers are the current craze in Europe, notes Ferretti. Sweeter and more tender than reds, they are considered the ultimate pepper on flavor and quality.

Popularity of Mexican foods has added to the demand for peppers, especially frying and "hot" types. In fact, Ferretti advised growers to plant the seeds of "any hot pepper you can get seed of."

One top quality frying type is Fry King, thin-skinned and thick fleshed. For spicy palates, the Tam Mild Chile #2 and Tam Mild Jalapeno #1 are recommended.

Sugar-enhanced, known as "super-sweet," corn is gaining plenty of public attention recently. However, the need by this type of corn for isolation from other varieties is a major drawback for small patch growers. Cross pollination with other varieties results in a starchy, tasteless ear of corn. This isolation requirement may limit the use of super-sweets for home gardens.

But Ferretti says that the good news for sweet corn lovers is that tasty corn may soon be available year round. Tasteless winter corn-on-the-cob has not helped sales levels opf sweet corn in the past, since a batch of the flavorless, shipped type may completely turn a consumer against all sweet corn.

Varieties of sweet corn recommended for the area include the yellow Seneca hybrid, with good levels of cold tolerance, the bicolor Crystal-N-Gold, and white types Spring Crystal, Pearl White amd Snowbelle.

Mulched corn, grown under slitted plastic, is gaining a following by growers aiming for the lucrative early market. Suitable mulching varieties include yellows Gold Dust, Seneca Star, Seneca Horizon and Sundance. Jazz, Crystal-N-Gold, and Pride-N-Joy are three bicolors which perform well under mulch, and recommended whites are Spring Crystal, Pearl White and Quicksilver.

Snap beans continue to be popular for both fresh retailing and processing. The variety Flo is a general, multi-purpose type, useful for both fresh and shipping and adaptable for hand and machine harvest, with tolerance to anthracnose. Other popular greens are Strike, Eagle and B.B. Lake, although the last tends toward curling of the beans. Recommended yellow types are Goldrush, Midas and Majestic.

Last year's muskmelon trials in Cumberland County showed the variety Columbia to be the best of the lot. More locally grown and more perishable specialty melons appear to be a marketing trend of the future for growers to watch.

Honeydews are enjoying increased popularity, with Limelight one of the best. Honeylope combines the best qualities of honeydews and cantaloupes, but keeps growers guessing on the best time to harvest. Another cross, Honeyshaw, blends the characteristics of honeydews with crenshaws, but has no tolerance for shipping and useful solely for local retail sales.

A new cucumber variety, Comet 86, came through testing at Cornell with excellent results. Comet 86 displayed a tolerance to all major cucurbit diseases, harvested plentiful yields and matured at 60 days. Other recommended are Raider, Pacer, SZweet Slice, which tends toward curling and less disease resistance, and the standard Marketmore.

Broccoli continues to enjoy climbing popularity on America's dinnertables, promoted by the medical profession as nutritious, fiber rich and possibly anti-carcinogenic. The variety Packman is surpassing earlier Comet favorites, maturing early at 48 days. A new main season is Prominence, superior to the widely-grown Premium Crop. Good later varieties are Green Defender and Shogun.

Also high on the cole crop popularity list is cauliflower, with Snow Crown still the favored early. The longer maturing Sno-pak shows more promise as a late season type, due to better leaf cover of the head.

"Minor vegetables will continue to be profitable for growers," advised Ferretti, as retailers and food service ride the nutrition trend toward fresh produce.

One crop in constant high demand and perpetual short supply is asparagus. Growers should consider both Jersey Giant and Jersey Centennial, much improved types over the standard Mary Washington.

Novella II, a semi-leafless garden pea, is nearly self-supporting in double rows, and shows fusarium tolerance. And, among squash lovers, Sunburst, a yellow scalloped 1985 All-American winner is winning converts on flavor and appearance.

Greens continue to ride the natural wave, along with the influence of ethnic cooking, especially Oriental dishes. One green that holds tenderness and flavor, along with being heat-resistant is Savannah, a hybrid mustard.

And, then there's Radiochio, a gourmet novelty that commanded a $6.99/lb. price last summer in Philadelphia markets. Salad enthusiasts give this introduction points for adding texture and color.

Red or bronze lettuces lend a similar effect to dishes of greens, with the specialty types commanding growing retail interest. One superior bronze lettuce is Red Sails.

Chinese cabbage, Fiesta Hybrid Indian corn and Carousel popcorn are other "hot" retailing produce items, along with other specialties such as bunching onions and miscellaneous ethnic cooking favorites.

York farmers donate blood

Fruit and vegetable producers Steve Markey, left, and his brother, Jim, were among the York County Farmers' Association members who turned out last week to contribute in the group's blood donor program. While it was a first for the pair, both concurred they'd be willing to participant again.

Lebanon 4-H Livestock Club honors outstanding members

BY JACK HUBLEY

SHAEFFERSTOWN — Although Lebanon County's Outstanding Rookie 4-H'er doesn't come from a farm, he's certainly off to a running start in the livestock business. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Kleinfelter of Myerstown, Michael Kleinfelter received the 4-H Livestock Club's top first-year member award at the club's annual recognition banquet held at the Shaefferstown Fire Hall on Feb. 25.

Nine-year-old Kleinfelter has completed swine and beef projects, and has shown livestock at the Lebanon County Fair, winter roundup, Farm Show and the Keystone International Livestock Expo. He is also a member of the county livestock judging team.

Michael is actually the youngest third of a trio of brothers who raise livestock on the family's two-acre farmette. Along with his brothers Jay, 13, and Donald, 11, Michael raises four steers, two sows and a beef cow that calved for the first time last May. Brother Don was voted Outstanding Rookie last year.

Each year the Lebanon club selects outstanding members for rookie, junior and senior honors, and Lebanon's Brian Kreider went home with this year's Outstanding Junior Member award. The son of Carol and Richard Kreider, Brian was a member of the high scoring team in livestock judging at the state level.

Although his family raises beef cattle, Brian prefers showing pigs, "because they're easier to fit," he says. His enthusiasm for showing swine is obvious. At the age of 11, Brian has already shown two Lebanon County champion market hogs: the first time, in 1983, and again last year.

Unlike Brian Kreider, Kelly Heisey, the club's Outstanding Senior Member, enjoys fitting show cattle.

Her parents, Mark and Lois Heisey, run a dairy operation near Lebanon, but Kelly was never very enthusiastic about showing dairy cattle. "I like to fit steers," she says. "It's a lot of work, but you can do so much more with them."

Although she doesn't plan to pursue a career in agriculture, Heisey has nothing but praise for the 4-H program, citing leadership experience and friendships as two of the program's benefits.

Active in numerous leadership roles, Kelly currently serves as the 4-H club's vice president, as well as secretary for the Lebanon Area Fair.

According to Lebanon Extension agent, Ken Winebark, more than 92 firms supported the 4-H club at the county fair, winter roundup and junior livestock sale at Farm Show. Winebark expects the club's enrollment to increase from its present 52 members to more than 60 for the coming year's program. Following are a list of members honored for their achievements during the past show season: will be in the upper ranges.

The dairyman's herd buyout dilemma

Can he offset some of his family expenses with off-farm income or other agricultural pursuits — non-dairy ones, of course? Then, his bid will be in the lower range.

Or has he retired his debts, for the most part, in preparation for a graceful exit from farming? Then, maybe the lower ranges — and an accepted bid — are in the future.

Those mid-range producers, especially the ones looking for a non-dairy farming future, have an especially tricky set of calculations to make, Shirk said.

Suppose their bid enables them to make a smooth transition to crop-farming or beef production, two of the alternatives discussed most often. But what if the profit from the new operation is not sufficient to service their debt? Such a scenario is possible, Shirk insists, because of the relatively high profit of the dairying enterprise, compared to other farming operations of similar size.

Part of the reason for the increasing bid estimates, explains Inter-State Milk Producers economist James Fraher, is the tight restrictions USDA has imposed on participants.

The department, he noted, chose to make the program a five-year buyout, rather than three years. And it has attached some fairly stiff penalties to discourage cheating, he said.

USDA's intent, he added, is to make sure participants stay out of dairying — and don't return after five years.

"They were criticized after the diversion program, for being too easy on participants," said Fraher. "And they're not going to do that again."

Extension dairy expert Jack Kirkland said that many of the dairymen in the state are having trouble coming to terms with the strategy of a competitive bid for the buyout.

"It's like bidding for any kind of contract," said Kirkland. "It's a gaming strategy they haven't had to deal with before."

Nevertheless, he said, they simply must accept the fact that their bids may well shape their financial futures. And either extreme — a bid that's too low to cover expenses or one that's too high to be accepted — could prove to be an individual producer's undoing.

Whatever the outcome for individuals, Kirkland said, the producers who remain may well have to look forward to continuing surpluses, with advances in genetics and biotechnology looming just around the corner.

"Excess production is going to keep cropping up over the next few years," he said. "And it's going to keep weeding out the less efficient producers."

Consumers more quality conscious

YORK — Ever heard the "pig out - workout" syndrome?

That's just one way Dr. Tom Brewer describes the gourmet food and physical fitness trends sweeping the country, and changing the eating habits of America.

Brewer, Penn State extension ag economist, told producers at the York-Lancaster vegetable meeting they can cash in on consumer demands for fresh and natural foods.

Population changes are also affecting food marketing. A growing "older" population, more single households as well as double income families, better education and willingness to try new foods are all reflected in changing consumer patterns.

With more spendable income available, price is not a major deterrent in food shopping; customers are willing to pay for what they want.

"Tomatoes and strawberries in January are things that consumers have come to expect," says Dr. Brewer. "They've become more quality and value conscious."

Both supermarket and food service establishments have responded to the "fresh" wave with expanded produce sections and attractive salad bar offerings. One recent supermarket produce section survey turned up an average of 140 different fresh vegetable and fruit items, compared with an average of 65 items just seven years ago.

Increasing volumes of fresh items are coming from South America and the Carribean areas. While retailers show interest in obtaining local supplies of fresh produce, large wholesale volumes are often involved. Such large volume needs may prohibit smaller producers from locking in supply contracts.

"Whoever provides the quality, the variety, the packaging, is who will serve the future markets," Brewer warned.

Other topics covered at the annual vegetable growers meeting included no-till cropping, weed, disease and pest control and nutrient runoff and its impact on the Cheaspeake Bay.

York County Holstein Club sets barn meeting

DILLSBURG — Doug and Joanne Cope will host the York County Holstein club's spring barn meeting on Tuesday, March 4, beginning at 1 p.m.

The Cope's Four-Co farm is owned by Doug and Joanne, and his parents John and Helen Cope. The operation has been milking since April, 1985, with a 48 head herd now averaging 19,900 milk and 560 fat, and a 62-pound daily average.

York County Holstein members and other interested representatives of the Holstein and dairy industry are invited to attend

Four-Co farm is located on the west side of Route 74, about five miles north of Wellsville, and one mile south of Northern High School. Snow date is March 11.

ASA attacks European trade barriers

ST. LOUIS, MO – The European Community's (EC) plans to implement restrictions on imports and consumption of U.S. soybeans and products in Spain and Portugal could eventually destroy one-fourth of the entire U.S. export market for soybeans, according to soybean farmer leaders. These restrictions are set to be imposed March 1st.

"EC representatives recently informed American Soybean Association (ASA) farmer leaders, currently on a trade policy mission in Europe that U.S. government officials in Washington appear unconcerned about these restrictions," said George Fluegel, ASA president and LeRoy, IL soybean farmer. "Failure by our government to act decisively now could lead to similar restrictions throughout the EC, thus jeopardizing a $3.5 billion U.S. soybean export market."

In a telegram to President Ronald Reagan, Secretary of State George Schultz, U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter, other Administration officials and various members of Congress, Fluegel and Jack Reed, chairman of the National Soybean Processors Association, strongly stressed the need for immediate U.S. action.

The planned restrictions in Portugal could limit soybean imports to about 400,000 tonnes, significantly below the 750,000 tonnes of soybeans estimated to be imported by Portugal this year. Internal soybean oil consumption would also be restricted and would not be able to exceed 40,000 tonnes, down almost 25 pct from the 55,000 tonnes of soybean oil currently being consumed by the Portuguese.

These restrictions are being imposed by Portugal under pressure from the EC as part of the adjustments Portugal must undertake to become a member in the EC. This would make Portugal more "equal" with Spain, who already has consumption quotas on soybean oil in place. Spain is also becoming a member of the EC.

Fluegel said the EC is taking this action without consultation wit the U.S. as required by the Gener Agreement on Tariffs and Trad (GATT). He said this is a blatar violation of the zero-duty bindin negotiated in 1962, the larges single trade concession eve received by the U.S. throug GATT.

"It is absolutely imperative tha the U.S. government take stron immediate action to prevent E soybean restrictions," sai Fluegel. "I urged Presiden Reagan to tell the EC in stronges terms that retaliation is certain i they continue their present course The future of our nation's 450,00 soybean farmers is at stake."

Mid-Atlantic Soybean unit slates March 10 meeting

DOVER, DE. – The Mid-Atlantic Soybean Association will hold its annual meeting Monday, March 10, at the Sheraton Inn in Dover, Del. All soybean farmers in Maryland, Delaware, New Jersey and Pennsylvania are urged to attend.

"This meeting is a great way to stay current on issues which affect soybean farmers, and to learn how your checkoff funds support market expansion programs," says Hank Spies, president of the Mid-Atlantic Soybean Association.

At the meeting, Stan Compton – American Soybean Development Foundation president and Larned, Kan., soybean farmer – will speak on how soybean checkoff funds build markets around the world.

In addition to Compton, also on the program is Dr. William Kenworthy, associate professor of agronomy at the University of Maryland. He will speak on how research on wild soybean varieties native to Australia can improve Mid-Atlantic soybean yields. William Otto, Dean Witter associate vice president – futures, will provide an outlook on the 1986 soybean market.

The women's program will feature Dr. Deloras Dixon, a participant in the USDA Women in Agriculture Asian Study Mission, and Bobbie Hinman, who will demonstrate cooking with tofu.

That evening, there will be a banquet to recognize individuals who have made a special contribution to the Mid-Atlantic soybean industry.

Meeting registration and industry exhibits open at 2:00 p.m. The program begins at 3:00 p.m. Pre-registration for the meeting and the banquet is encouraged, although not required. There is no registration fee for the meeting. There is a $10.00 per person fee for the banquet.

To register for the annual meeting, or for more information, contact Jerry Kennedy, Mid-Atlantic Soybean Association, 301/742-9500.

Lupin beans:

They won't lose their cool in cold weather

BY JACK HUBLEY

COUDERSPORT — Northern tier farmers looking for a homegrown source of protein would do well to take a look at lupin beans, according to Potter County dairyman, Carl Erway.

Because of northern Pennsylvania's cold spring weather and shorter growing season, Erway says he's not willing to gamble on soybeans. So when he heard about the lupin's affinity for cooler weather he planted 21 acres last summer to give them a try.

Despite an unusually dry spring, his crop yielded 45 bushels per acre. Irway figures it cost him $130 a ton to grow, harvest and grind his beans, which is considerably cheaper than buying soybeans at the current rate, he says.

And since the dairyman can buy his energy–in the form of corn–cheaper than he can grow it, he's content to allow the southern counties grow his corn while he increases his lupin bean acreage.

According to Jim Hoopes, who grows and distributes lupin seed, the beans have outgrown their longstanding reputation for bitter taste. Hoopes, who produces seed for Good Earth Agri Products of Minnesota, says that sweeter varieties began appearing on the scene about 10 years ago. Like soybeans, lupins are a legume, capable of fixing up to 150 pounds of nitrogen per acre, according to a Good Earth brochure.

Like Carl Erway, Hoopes lists the lupin's preference for cold spring growing conditions as one of its greatest virtues. "It's a cool-climate crop," says Hoopes, who planted his beans on April 17 last year. The beans were about four to five inches high by May 10, when a cold front dropped the thermometer to 15°. "That burnt my alfalfa pretty bad," recalls Hoopes. But the next day you couldn't even tell it hit the beans."

On the other hand, unusually warm weather early in the year may injure the crop, Hoopes cautions. Penn State agronomist, Elwood Hatley agrees, pointing out that the lupin's low tolerance for heat stress makes it a riskier crop to grow than soybeans. "They really require vernalization (a cold treatment) to produce the yields," he says.

From a nutritional standpoint, lupins contain less oil than soybeans, notes Hatley. They also are somewhat lower in protein at about 35 percent, compared to soybeans' 40 percent level.

Despite lupin's lower protein level, however, swine producers may find them to be an economical alternative to soybeans, since lupins don't have to be heat-treated before being fed to simple-stomached animals such as swine.

Carl Erway says that his cows seem to do quite well on lupins. "I personally like to grind them to get them fine, more like cracked corn," says Erway, who presently feeds them to his high group as a 50-50 concentrate with three pounds of Agway Buxmont 40 percent concentrate. He also notes that he has seen a slight increase in butterfat content since feeding lupins.

Growing toward the sky, these lupin pods resemble a field of up-side-down soybeans. The lupin's preference for cold climates makes them a good northern tier alternative.

Jim Hoopes, whose harvest averaged 55 bushels last year, finds the beans easy to harvest. Because they can be planted early, lupins are ready to harvest in September before the onset of bad weather. And, unlike soybeans, lupin pods grow upward and stay that way until harvest time. "So you can run your combine 10 to 12 inches off the ground," Hoopes points out.

Based on what he's seen so far, Carl Erway plans to increase his lupin production to 38 acres this year. "As the noose gets tighter around the dairyman's neck, we do have to keep looking for ways to produce our own feedstuffs," he points out. "Lupins are a good crop to keep an eye on."

Conservation Reserve

meet the erosion requirements outlined to be eligible.

Land set aside in the reserve must be planted in permanent vegetative cover for the 10-year duration of the contract, and if the land is returned to crop production before the contract expires, the farmer must reimburse the government for all costs plus interest.

Participating farmers will receive annual rental payments and will be reimbursed for one-half the cost of establishing vegetative cover on reserve acreage. Technical assistance for establishing cover will be provided by the Soil Conservation Service and Conservation Districts, as well as other agencies.

In addition to working in an advisory capacity, the Game Commission will be providing seedlings, as well. According to Jake Sitlinger, director of the Commission's Bureau of Land Management, tree and shrub seedlings will be provided free of charge to farmers already participating in one of the Commission's public access programs.

Cover crops eligible for the program include legumes, grasses, trees and other wildlife habitat crops, but grazing will not be permitted, and reserve acreage may not be planted in Christmas trees, vineyards, orchards, nut trees or nursery stock.

Although USDA has established a ceiling $50,000 in annual rental payments per participant, no per-acre rental rates have been recommended. "We don't know what an acceptable bid will be, by any means." says Pennay, who advises farmers to sit down with local extension personnel to discuss bidding rates. A bidding worksheet, developed by extension farm management specialist William McSweeny, is available at all county extension and ASCS offices, and farmers should contact their local Soil Conservation Service offices to find out what acreage on their properties is eligible for the program. Signup for CRP will take place at all local ASCS offices across the state.

Who does ASCS expect to see knocking at their doors? Richard Pennay feels that farmers nearing retirement, or those not needing their own grain production due to a reduction in livestock numbers might find the program attractive. Farmers interested in establishing trees and wildlife cover are also potential participants, he says. One other government official predicted that landowners disenchanted with their current rental arrangements might decide to enter their rented ground in the program.

For farmers who might be unwilling to jump into the program on short notice, Pennay notes that a signup for 1987 participation will be scheduled later this year.

Lancaster ASCS schedules meeting

According to Lancaster ASCS director, Ray Brubaker, a public meeting will be held to discuss both the Conservation Reserve and acreage reduction programs. The meeting is scheduled for Mar. 11, 7:30 p.m. at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center.

Inter-State District 26 sets meeting

SOUTHAMPTON, PA. – The Chambersburg and Mercersburg Local of Inter-State Milk Producers' Cooperative District 26 will hold its annual dinner meeting March 14 at 7 p.m. at Kauffman's Ruritan Building, Director V. Myers Metcalfe announced.

Guest speaker will be James S. Fraher, Inter-State economist. Fraher will review the cooperative's goals for the coming year and will discuss dairy provisions of the 1985 Farm Bill.

The meeting will be conducted by Kenneth Schoenberg, Chambersburg and Mercersburg Local president. He will present 25-year membership plaques to John W and Louise Myers Jr., Chambersburg, and Alfred B. Burkholder, Fayetteville.

Inter-State Milk Producers' Cooperative District 26 covers Franklin County and the southwest part of Adams County.

Grange will offer Blue Cross/Blue Shield

HARRISBURG – Charles E. Wismer, Master of the PA State Grange, has announced that the State Grange is offering a Blue Cross/Blue Shield program to Grange members and their families.

"The State Grange has worked very long and hard to find an acceptable state-wide program with great rates and good coverage," said Master Wismer. "This program has been approved by the State Grange Insurance Committee, Member Service Committee, and the Executive Committee," added Master Wismer.

In addition to the basic hospital, medical, and surgical benefits of the Blue Cross hospital protection and Blue Shield medical/surgical protection, each member and their eligible dependents will have a $1,000,000 major medical protection. This program also includes a $1,000,000 senior medicare supplement for members who are age 65 and over.

Enrollment begins March 1, 1986 and coverage will begin April 1, 1986. Members can enroll the first of any month if application is received in the State Grange office by the 15th of the preceding month.

This is the first time in 28 years that the State Grange has had a state-wide Blue Cross/Blue Shield program. Interested members can contact the State Grange office at 1(800)242-9661.

In Western PA Grange members can attend several meetings explaining the new Grange service.

The scheduled meetings are as follows:

- Thursday, March 6, 1 p.m., at Donegal Grange Hall, Westmoreland County.
- Thursday, March 6, 8 p.m., at Big Knob Grange Hall, Grange Rd., Rochester, Beaver County.
- Friday, March 7, 1 p.m., at Sheraton Inn, Clarion.

Most of these are individual herd problems," he stated and can be controlled.

Spencer rounded out the discussions for the day with comments on milking equipment research and problems. "The milking machine is fairly low in the incidence of (causing) mastitis," Spencer commented. Liner slips or vacuum fluctations can lead to the mastitis, with 70% of liner slips being inaudible.

Spencer used graphs to illustrate his points and how the research that was conducted on vacuum fluctations, leading to the liner slips. To minimize slips, he concluded, good liners and good unit positioning is extremely important, Spencer added. "We got to look at the way we're operating these machines to prevent slips," he concluded.

Claw designs, pulsation line sizes, milk meters, and agitation times were also discussed by Spencer.

Detailed questions punctuated the discussions throughout the day as the analysis of these topics progressed. Dairymen concluded the seminar with encouragement to use the somatic cell count information available to them, culture to find what is in the herd, and treat or cull effectively.

McMurray is first woman to lead PSU's college of ag alumni group

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

STATE COLLEGE — Patty Marchezak McMurray graduated from Penn State in 1971 and is truly Penn State Proud! Today Penn State is almost as much a part of her life as it was in undergraduate days, since she is serving her first year as president of the College of Agriculture Alumni Society. Patty makes it clear that she is enjoying this unique opportunity to give back to the college some of what she feels she has gained.

Patty was the first woman, and the youngest, to be elected to the board of directors of CAAS. She served two years as president-elect before moving up to president, and comments, "I am honored that they thought I had the skills to become president of the organization we have become. It is a great responsibility." Since then she notes that there are several other female members of the board, some younger than she.

The College of Agriculture Alumni Society has been around since 1968, but it has been revitalized recently after members spent two years doing a self-study. "We have grown so much and have become much more visible. It has absolutely revitalized the organization," Patty states.

According to Patty, the self study involved a lot of "cerebral" work. I did more thinking during that time. It is surprising how exhausting it was. But we had such capable people on the board, and the work has paid off."

The board has grown in numbers as a result of the self-study, now including 15 members to make a committee system work more effectively. Patty says, "It has exploded, with fragments everywhere. We now have members involved throughout the state." Patty says she is constantly meeting new alumni, adding, "Each of us knows people and don't realize they are Penn Staters.

Patty gives good marks to those who serve on the board, saying, "I am impressed with how well our members attend meetings. It is at their own expense, and we have one member from Maryland and one from Michigan."

By virtue of her position as president, Patty also sits on the Alumni Council which has representatives of all the constituent societies, so she really appreciates the support CAAS enjoys. "Some don't have the support of their deans. The dean of the college of agriculture adds believability to the group.

It is very difficult for individuals to call meetings," Patty says. The dean's support includes naming a staff member to serve as executive director, something which adds stability and continuity to the group.

The college of agriculture leads other colleges in the percentage of alumni who are members of the Alumni Association, another factor in the success of CAAS. Patty points out, "As a college we have the best percentage of graduates who belong. We're very proud of that." She explains that there are about 16,000 college of agriculture graduates who are eligible for membership.

There is currently a membership drive by the Penn State Alumni Association, and membership in that automatically makes graduates a member of their college alumni group. During the membership drive, the college who sells the highest percentage of memberships will receive a cash award to help develop programs. CAAS would like to be the winner.

Patty points out that being a member of the Alumni Association also adds points in the system for getting football tickets.

The Alumni Association is offering discounts on their rate until July 1. Lifetime rates for an individual until then are $200. After that they will increase to $250. Patty notes that people who are not Penn State graduates, but who support the University may become associate members of the Alumni Association.

She notes that with a permanent CAAS office in the Ag Administration Building, any alumni can get information on a former professor or a former classmate. This office is also willing to help with arrangements if alumni want to bring children who are considering enrolling.

The whole purpose of CAAS, according to Patty, is "to provide a reason and a way for alumni to become involved." The society also strives to support the University, help in recruitment of new students and will be providing recognition to faculty, alumni and students for their outstanding achievements.

The self-study developed 13 objectives for the society, and Patty says, "We are working on each of the objectives in a small way." She believes strongly that organizations need to have a current project to promote interest, and notes that the last major project of CAAS was helping with the Ag Arena, now a reality.

Patty McMurray, president of the College of Agriculture Alumni Society, reviews a meeting schedule with Ward Stover, past president of the association.

As president of the Penn State College of Agriculture Alumni Society, Patty McMurray presides over a recent meeting.

She said they are studying the idea of having a "big event," which would involve many facets of agriculture, perhaps bringing outstanding speakers to the University. "We would like it to be an educational event, perhaps tied to something else going on at the University."

Meanwhile the committees are at work, soliciting scholarships, working on internships,. talking with potential students, soliciting ideas and in general promoting a positive image about the University.

Patty notes that she enjoys her association with the University as much now as when she was a student, but points out that her first memory of Penn State was as a 10-year-old 4-H'er attending a Guernsey sale in what is now a theatre. She recalls that her father, John, let her do her own bidding for a 4-H animal, and, after it was hers, the animal "won junior champion everywhere she went. The sort of impression that had on me went a long way."

She traveled to Penn State many more times before she became a student, attending many 4-H events, especially State Days as part of the Washington County Judging team. "I was exposed to a lot of Penn State personnel," she recalls.

Despite her familiarity with the University and a strong desire to attend, she remembers being very homesick as a freshmen. "I was shy as a child, and even though I was a cheerleader and valedictorian in high school, I was not very outgoing. Penn State and my husband were very good for me. I learned to loosen up."

She adds, "I give a lot of credit to the young people in the Dairy Science Club who helped me through those times. They took an interest in me, and took care of me. There was a group of married students, and others of all different ages, and I had a network to turn to. You were accepted for what you were right then."

She also joined a sorority, Alpha Chi Omega, which offered her the chance to meet many different people. Simply put, Patty recalls, "I blossomed at Penn State "

In addition to adjusting to campus life, Patty had to make another longer term adjustment. "All my life all I ever wanted to be was a veterinarian. But I was so allergic I had to switch to general agriculture after two and a half years "

There was never any question about moving out of agriculture for this woman, who was raised on her father's Guernsey farm near Bentleyville in Washington County, and who thrived helping with the animals. It's just that she can't spend her whole life in the barn.

Patty quickly immersed herself in student life, including lots of dairy activities. She was the first female to win the all around championship at the Dairy Exposition, a fete she accomplished as a freshman. Despite making it into the final phase of judging every year after that, she never again was named all around champion. "They never picked me," she says.

She also judged with the dairy cattle judging team, winning the Brown Swiss class at the national contest. Eventually, she added another "first" to her achievements when she became the first woman named as an approved Pennsylvania Dairy Cattle Association judge, which she did the year after graduating from Penn State. Because of her inclusion on this list, Patty says she was frequently the first woman judge at dairy shows throughout the state.

She remarks, "In agriculture women have had a better place than in other areas. You have the basic feeling that you've had more equality. Women have gotten credit along the way."

She continues judging today, saying, "I'm as busy as I want to be. I do about six or eight shows a year, which is a lot when you consider the short span of time for shows to be held." Additionally, Patty is now on the "4-H circuit" with her own children. She and her husband, John, have three sons, Justin, 11; Jonathan, 8; and Adam, 5.

Patty has always shown cattle for her father, and continues to be in charge of the show string The advantage is that she can take her children with her. She is involved in the dairy operation, which has changed since she lived at home, in that now the herd is about three quarters Holsteins. She says, "I work every day that I'm home. I take care of the calves in the evening, and I do all the bookwork and finances."

Her husband, who graduated from Penn State in food science in 1969, works in product development for the H. J. Heinz Corp., and Patty says, "His greatest help is his support and the acceptance of my taking off to attend meetings. I really appreciate that."

Patty is very involved with 4-H in Washington County, serving as a leader for the Dairy Science Club, and working with the dairy judging and dairy bowl teams. She is also on the Junior Committee for the Holstein Association, and is currently hard at work producing the "definitive guide for fitting and showing," something she believes will be very beneficial to young people.

She is in charge of public relations and advertising for the Washington County Fair and will be chairman of the National Junior Guernsey Convention. She was involved with the planning for the recently completed Holstein convention, where she headed up the women's committee.

There's no question about her loyalty — she supports Penn State all the way. "It's a learning experience. A bigger school offers more than a smaller school, because you can see and experience everything I would recommend it to anyone, though I suffered my first year."

Long after the suffering stopped, Patty found she had enough credits to graduate early, and quickly added more so that she wouldn't leave until the end of her full four years

Patty welcomes input from any interested alumni. She thinks CAAS is a vital network for agriculture within Pennsylvania, and she's proud of the part she is playing in expanding its role

BEST IN DESIGN, PRICE AND EXPERIENCE

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

It seems that history holds a certain fascination for me, I've just reread some turn of the century diaries and tried to visualize the farm life at that time.

They had lots of work to keep them busy as they baked their own bread, churned 30 pounds of butter a week and made their own clothes. The butter was peddled in nearby villages together with vegetables and fruits in season.

The butchering of beef and hogs was all done at home. It took several days to not only grind the meat for bologna and sausage but also "fry it down" for canning or storage in crocks covered with lard.

The diary that I read mentions the work that the women did in the fields. They planted tobacco, piled hay and hauled loads of corn. But, no where did I read of the men baking pies, sweeping the house or tending the sick children.

However, it was not all work on this farm as they attended church twice a week and held "Bible Readings" in their home. There were many local spelling bees and lovefeasts to attend. On Sundays they hunted arbutus and in the fall chestnuts.

Many entries in the diaries tell of visiting relatives. These folks often stayed as overnight guests because of the distance that they had to travel. If they took a train to Philadelphia to see Independence Hall, the Mint and the wharfs it was the big event of the year

I'm not sure that we'd be too happy if we could read diaries written at the next turn of the century. It is best that we don't know what lies in our future. We would ponder the coming events and still could not change them. All we can do is hope for the best and have faith in God.

Bee Pollen: modern day snake oil

NEWARK, Del. – "Bee pollen is a current favorite among promoters who promise to cure all of our ills with just one product," says Dr. Sue Snider, University of Delaware foods and nutrition specialist. "We all want good health, but achieving it is a lot more complicated than swallowing pills or powder. The claims for bee pollen are simply not supported by scientific research."

Promoters often sell products such as bee pollen by using testimonials from people who swear by their curative powers. For example, you may hear that pollen retards aging. As proof, proponents cite the natives of Russian Georgia, saying they owe their longevity to a pollen-rich diet. However, according to a study of elderly persons in that region, 60 percent ate a diet of milk, vegetables, meat and fruit. Although honey, which contains some pollen, was sometimes included, Snider says bee pollen was not mentioned as a food source.

Another claim is that pollen kills bacteria. Actually, pollen has no anitbacterial qualities and is rapidly attacked by bacteria, yeast and other fungi when exposed to air. So it should be stored as any perishable food.

Claims have been made that pollen is the richest known source of protein. "But in fact," says the nutrition specialist, "pollen is mainly carbohydrate. Although it contains some protein, quality and quantity vary depending on the plant source. Even if bee pollen were rich in protein, there are much less expensive sources, including filet mignon."

Promoters may claim that bee pollen relieves allergies, asthma and hay fever. But some scientists believe that bee pollen can actually trigger allergic reactions and so is especially hazardous for people suffering from these conditions.

There's no proof that bee pollen enhances athletic performance either. Tests in which one group of athletes was given bee pollen and another group was given placebos revealed no significant differences in the athletes' performances

Bee pollen is fine for bees, but Snider says there is no evidence that it is a superior food for humans. It has not been proved that bee pollen can cure anything, and it is not classed as a drug. It is illegal to market bee pollen with labeling claiming any therapeutic effects.

Saf-T Liner®
Stainless Steel Chimney Liner

Heat-Fab Stainless Steel Chimney Liner is the professional installer's best solution for relining brick chimneys with deteriorated tile or those that were never lined.

A professional installer can reline a chimney in half a day and restore it with an anticipated life of 25 to 30 years of wood burning appliances.

Heat-Fab uses only 24-gauge stainless steel and resistant welds for the kind of safety that satisfies code requirements as a substitute for 5/8" fireclay liner.

Best of all, it's far less expensive then replacing chimneys and one of the most economical products of its kind. From Heat-Fat, where else?

It is important that Saf-T Liner be installed to conform to local codes.

On being a farm wife -And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

"Here," says the cheerful lady in the bright pink sweater "Squeeze this ball in your hand, then release it. And keep doing that."

I squeeze the yellow tennis-size ball in my hand. Its soft foam compacts in my fist, then bounces back to shape when released.

"I have a cat that would love this ball," I observe

"In a couple of weeks, every donor will get one of these to take home," comes back the reply from the smiling technician in pink

And then· "Keep squeezing It helps the blood flow better."

Well, if you say so, I figure, wondering how squeezing a soft foam ball is boosting my circulation. If that's the case, the cat should never have to worry about circulation problems.

There are four of us in the cushy, reclining chairs From a point under the tender skin on the inside bend of each of our elbows a stream of dark red is flowing through plastic piping into a pint-sized plastic bag

And then it was done — and the procedure had been practically painless. Only a tiny pinprick for a pre-donation sample and the insertion of the tiny needle into the "phlebotomy" site (that's an ominous-sounding medical term for giving blood.) Gee, the ball-loving cat scratches harder than that.

Certainly, part of the ease of the procedure lay with the fact that several familiar faces were already present in the waiting room when I arrived. It's comforting to have friends around when many of you are approaching a new experience.

We passed the "phlebotomy" quiz, a series of questions concerning our general health, both for our personal well-being in giving blood, and for the safety of a potential recipient of the donation. Sort of a mass induction, followed by an individual cursory medical check of vital signs.

These farmers here to donate blood wanted to assure a supply if our families — and others need it And the look on the face of one candidate turned down showed obvious disappointment in not being allowed to participate.

Camaraderie and teasing one another was the bonus, the chance to share together the feeling of contributing to a worthwhile cause Besides, who could be nervous while enjoying one tale related by a veteran donor. Seems the veteran had once attempted to put at ease a group of first-time donors, only to feel faint just minutes after the morale-boosting cheerleading had taken place.

Back home, none the worse in any way for the loss, the noon radio news reinforced the need for what local farmers were doing that day Included in the broadcast were ag fatality statistics: farm accident fatalities at a 15-year high, four times higher than other industries. And more than half of those tractor related, with a high statistical rate of accidents attributed to young, inexperienced operators. Accidents are but a mere split-second away at any time.

Those statistics were more painful than the pinpricks of an hour or two before. So are the statistics on death and injury by automobile — especially drunk driving — and by manufacturing mishaps, unexpected surgical and hospital complications, and manmade and natural disaster Sometimes, a transfusion may well mark the difference between life and death.

We really should get together with friends to do this more often.

Solve dinner dilemma with one-pot meals

Some days a seven-course meal is just right, but for the most part, busy cooks don't have the time to prepare these deluxe dinners. That's when simple, one-pot cooking is the answer to the dinner dilemma.

Quick and easy to prepare, these one-pot meals combine a variety of tasty ingredients. For lunch, or a light supper, you might want to try a salad or hearty soup. For a more substantial meal, check out some of the casseroles below.

And, when the meal is over, enjoy the easy cleanup

FIVE-DECKER DINNER

6 slices bacon
1 pound hamburger
4 potatoes, sliced
4 to 6 carrots, sliced
¼ cup chopped onion
2 cups frozen green beans or peas
Salt and pepper to taste
¼ cup water

Place bacon in bottom of a large skillet, then add the hamburger. Place vegetables layer by layer, over the meat, seasoning each layer. Cook on medium heat until bacon sizzles. Add water. Reduce heat to low. Cover and cook for about 45 minutes.

Eileen Stahl
Lititz

LAYERED SUPPER

4 medium potatoes, sliced
1 cup corn
1 green pepper, chopped
1 cup carrots, sliced
½ pound ground beef
Salt
Pepper
1 can tomato sauce
1 onion, chopped

Place potatoes in greased casserole. Top with the balance of vegetables. Crumble ground beef over it. Salt and pepper above. Pour 1 can tomato sauce over it. Bake covered at 350°F. for 2 hours., Uncover and sprinkle with cheese of your choice. Return to oven for 8 minutes.

COUNTRY CASSEROLE

Brown in skillet:
½ pound hamburger
½ cup chopped onion
⅓ cup chopped green pepper

Add to hamburger in one-quart casserole:
1 16-ounce can beans
2 cups cooked macaroni
½ cup tomato juice
Salt
Pepper

Heat in 400°F. oven for about 25 minutes. Put several slices cheese on top and return to oven until melted.

June Kress
Hanover

TATER TOT CASSEROLE

1½ pounds ground beef
Salt and pepper
1 onion, diced
1 can cream of mushroom soup
1 can cream of chicken soup
¼ cup water
2 cans mixed vegetables
2 small bags tater tots

Brown hamburger and drain. Put in 13x9-inch pan; sprinkle with salt, pepper and onion. Mix together soups and water and pour this over hamburger. Add 2 cans drained vegetables. (Note: you can use home-canned vegetables.) Put tater tots on top and bake in 350°F. oven for 1 hour.

This recipe contains ingredients from the basic four food groups and is delicious!

Mercersburg

DELUXE CHICKEN SUPPER

3 strips bacon
¾ cup chopped onion
½ cup chopped celery
¼ cup chopped green pepper
1 4-ounce can sliced mushrooms, drained
1 10½-ounce can cream of celery soup
1 cup dairy sour cream
3 cups cubed, cooked chicken
¼ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
1/8 teaspoon pepper
2 cups biscuit mix
2 eggs, slightly beaten
½ cup milk
1 tablespoon chopped pimentos
1 cup shredded Cheddar cheese

Fry bacon, remove and saute onion, celery, green pepper and mushrooms in bacon drippings until tender. Combine soup and sour cream in a bowl. Add chicken, salt, Worcestershire sauce, pepper, 1 tablespoon milk, bacon and sauteed vegetables; mix well. Turn into greased 2-quart casserole. Combine biscuit mix, eggs, ½ cup milk, pimientos and cheese; mix until just blended. Drop by spoonfuls on top of chicken mixture. Bake at 350°F. for 45 minutes or until biscuits are golden brown. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

CABBAGE SOUP

1 cup chopped onion
2 tablespoons butter
2 cups shredded cabbage
1 10-ounce package frozen lima beans, cooked and drained
1 cup sliced carrots
1 cup diced potatoes
1 cup chicken broth
½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup butter
¼ cup all-purpose flour
¼ teaspoon paprika
¼ teaspoon pepper
3 cups milk
2 cups (8 ounces) shredded Cheddar cheese

Saute onion in 2 tablespoons butter in a large, heavy saucepan until tender, about 3 minutes. Add cabbage, beans, carrots, potatoes, broth and salt. Cover; bring to boil. Reduce heat and simmer until carrots and potatoes are tender, about 20 minutes. Meanwhile, melt ¼ cup butter in a 4-quart Dutch oven. Blend in flour, paprika and pepper. Remove from heat; stir in milk. Heat to boiling, stirring constantly. Boil and stir 1 minute. Remove from heat; stir in cheese until melted. If necessary, return to low heat to finish melting cheese. (Do not boil.) Add vegetables with liquid to cheese soup base. Heat to serving temperature.

YANKEE SEASHELL SALAD

1 15½-ounce can pink salmon
1 12-ounce package small shell macaroni
1½ cups whole kernel corn
1½ cups chopped green bell pepper
1½ cups sliced radishes
½ cup sliced ripe olives
1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
1 cup mayonnaise
⅓ cup dairy sour cream

Drain salmon. Break salmon into chunks. Cook macaroni according to package directions. Drain and cool. Combine salmon, macaroni, corn, green pepper, radishes, olives and mustard in a bowl. Fold in mayonnaise and sour cream. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

TANGY CHICKEN SALAD MOLD

Mold:
2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
1½ cups light cream OR half and half
2½ cups chicken broth
2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
½ teaspoon grated lemon peel
½ teaspoon salt
2 cups finely chopped cooked chicken
½ cup chopped celery
2 tablespoons chopped pimiento
1 tablespoon chopped chives
½ teaspoon nutmeg
Salad greens
Dressing:
⅔ cup dairy sour cream
1 to 2 teaspoons fresh lemon juice
¼ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons slivered almonds

For mold, soften gelatin in light cream in a large saucepan; stir in chicken broth. Heat over low heat, stirring constantly, until gelatin is dissolved. Stir in lemon juice, lemon peel and salt. Chill until jelly-like consistency. Fold in chicken, celery, pimiento, chives and nutmeg; blend well. Pour mixture in a 5-cup mold. Chill several hours or overnight. Meanwhile, for dressing, combine all ingredients in a small mixing bowl. Chill 1 to 2 hours to allow flavors to blend. To serve, unmold salad onto chilled, lettuce-lined plate; pass dressing.

Classic Arroz Con Pollo, chicken with rice, is a favorite dish in Spanish-speaking countries. This simple one-pot meal will probably be a hit with your family too.

CLASSIC ARROZ CON POLLO

1 broiler-fryer chicken, cut in parts
3 tablespoons olive oil
2 cups uncooked long-grain rice
1 cup chopped onion
1 sweet red pepper, chopped
1 green pepper, chopped
1 clove garlic, halved
1½ teaspoons salt, divided
½ teaspoon basil
4 cups chicken broth, warmed
Pinch of ground saffron
½ teaspoon turmeric
1 bay leaf
1 tablespoon freshly squeezed lime juice
2 cups chopped fresh tomatoes
½ teaspoon peppercorns, ground
1 cup fresh or frozen green peas

In large Dutch oven, place olive oil and heat to medium high temperature. Add chicken and cook, turning, about 10 minutes or until brown on all sides. Remove chicken to warm tray. Add rice, onion, red and green peppers and garlic to oil in pan; stir fry about 5 minutes. Sprinkle with ¾ teaspoon of the salt and basil. Add warmed chicken broth, stirring; then add saffron, turmeric, bay leaf and lime juice. Bring to a boil and add tomatoes. Arrange chicken on top and sprinkle with remaining ¾ teaspoon of the salt and ground peppercorns. Cover, reduce heat to low and continue cooking about 20 minutes. Add peas and continue to cook, covered, about 20 minutes longer until rice is done and fork can be inserted in chicken with ease.

CHICKEN SUPPER

1 can chicken soup
4 ounces mushrooms
3 ounces cooked chicken
¾ cup sour cream
½ cup onion
½ cup celery
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1/8 teaspoon pepper

In a 1½-quart casserole, combine all above ingredients. Cover and bake at 400°F. for 30 minutes. Drop your favorite biscuits on top and bake for 20 to 25 minutes more.

Correction

If you tried the Poor Man's Steak recipe in last week's issue and found that it cooked faster than you expected, you were right. The oven temperature in this recipe should be 300°F., not 400°F. Lancaster Farming apologizes for any inconvenience this error may have caused you

With the Easter holiday arriving, Patty McMurray offers a recipe for easy Easter bread that she says "tastes remarkably like my grandmother used to make," except that she kneaded it for hours.

Patty remembers working in the kitchen with her late grandmother, Anna Botsko, as a child Although her grandmother's recipe book cannot be found, Patty got this easy version of the bread from the master chef at the H.J. Heinz Corporation where her husband works

The recipe notes that it is a fantastic bread for any meal and is delicious toasted, but Patty says in her household there's never any left for toasting. She says her family likes to spread it with lots of butter For more on Patty, turn to page B2

Easy Easter Bread

½ cup milk
¼ cup butter
2 cups flour
¼ cup sugar
1 package dry yeast
3 eggs at room temperature

In a small saucepan heat the milk and butter to lukewarm In a large bowl mix ¾ cup flour, the sugar and the yeast. Add the warm milk mixture, stirring well Add eggs. Blend well and add remaining flour Cover and let rise 1 hour. Stir down and turn into a greased tube or bundt pan Let rise 30 to 40 minutes Bake in preheated 350°F oven for 40 minutes

ANSWER - Mrs Barbara Glick, Quarryville, requested a recipe for a pecan pie that has the pecans distributed throughout Thanks go to Kathyn Wolgemuth, Manheim, who shared the recipe below She says it came from Mrs Dick Thornburgh

Pecan Pie

Prepare unbaked 9-inch pie shell

In saucepan, combine

1 cup granulated sugar
1 cup dark corn syrup
½ teaspoon salt

Simmer until sugar dissolves Meanwhile, beat 3 eggs until foamy.

Stir into syrup

½ cup butter or margarine
1½ teaspoons vanilla
2 cups coarsely chopped pecans

Add eggs, turn into pie shell Bake at 350°F for 45 minutes Cool and refrigerate Serve with 1 cup heavy cream whipped or vanilla ice cream

Note If a lighter syrup is desired, molasses can be used to replace some of the dark corn syrup

ANSWER - Mrs W H. Rinehart, Stewartsville, NJ, asked for a wedding fruit cake recipe Thanks go to Faye Vornauer, Summerhill, for the following recipe "This recipe was in Good Housekeeping Cook Books, published about 1944," she writes.

Toasted Almond Fruit Cake

¼ pound shelled almonds
½ cup shortening
3 egg yolks, well beaten
3 egg whites, stiffly beaten
1 teaspoon allspice
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
1/8 teaspoon baking soda
¾ cup currants
1 tablespoon preserved orange rind, cut small
¼ pound glace cherries, cut small
3/8 pound preserved citron, thinly sliced
2 tablespoons melted fat
½ cup brown sugar, firmly packed
¼ cup molasses
1 cup sifted cake flour
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon mace
2 cups seeded raisins
2 cups Sultana raisins
1 tablespoon preserved lemon rind, cut small
¼ pound preserved pineapple, cut small ½ cup strawberry preserves
¼ cup grape juice

Cover almonds with boiling water Let stand 5 minutes Slip skins after draining Place almonds in large shallow pan with the melted fat and bake at 375°F about 20 minutes Chop coarsely Meanwhile, work shortening with spoon until creamy and fluffy Add brown sugar gradually and work with spoon until light Add beaten egg yolks and molasses and beat well Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites Sift together flour, salt, spices and baking soda Reserve ¼ cup of mixture for dredging fruit Add remaining flour mixture to egg mixture Add fruit which has been dredged in the ¼ cup flour mixture, the strawberry preserves, toasted chipped almonds and grape juice and stir until mixed. Bake in a greased, paper-lined 10x5x3-inch pan at 275°F for 4 hours. Makes 3½ pounds

For a 3-tiered wedding cake using this recipe, use 1 6x3 inch spring form pan, 1 10x3-inch spring form pan and 1 12x3-inch spring form pan Make 3 times the toasted almond fruit cake recipe for 2 small pans Fill the 6-inch and 10-inch pans Bake at 275°F , allowing 4½ hours for 6-inch cake and 5 hours for 10-inch cake or until done Make 4 times the recipe for the 12-inch pan Bake at 275°F about 5½ hours or until done Each pan should be lined with well-greased heavy paper These tiers weigh about 25¼ pounds.

To frost place 12-inch cake top side down on round of cardboard about same size Place both on 18-inch diameter or larger plate Ice lightly top and sides with Ornamental Frosting to set crumbs and any open spaces at base of cake Carefully add 10-inch cake in center of 12-inch cake Lightly frost, filling in open space between cakes Top with 6-inch cake Frost in same manner Set cake plate on a mixing bowl so plate is just slightly larger and can be turned around for icing

Make 3 times Ornamental Frosting Beat 3 to 4 minutes at high speed Start with top tier and completely frost cake with this frosting Dip spatula in hot water if necessary Beat remaining frosting until very stiff and knife leaves a clean path More confectioner's sugar may be added if needed in damp weather Use this with a cake decorator to decorate cake

Ornamental Frosting

1 pound confectioner's sugar	½ teaspoon cream of of tartar
3 egg whites, unbeaten	½ teaspoon vanilla or almond extract

Sift sugar and cream of tartar in fine sieve Add egg whites Mix with slotted spoon or wire whip about 3 minutes Add flavoring Spread enough on cake to set crumbs Beat rest 3 to 4 minutes at high speed Spread some over cake and smooth with spatula Beat remaining icing until very stiff and knife lets clean cut patch when drawn through Use this to decorate 3 8-inch layers Color divided portions as desired

ANSWER - Anna Jeanette Kannoda, Monongahela asked for a pigs' feet jell recipe Thanks go to Nancy Kramer, Newmanstown, for the following recipe

Pig's Feet Souse

4 pig's feet	½ cup vinegar
Salt and pepper to taste	or to suit taste

Put pig's feet in large kettle, add water to cover Cook until meat falls off the bones, about 3 to 4 hours Strain stock, saving 2 cups Cut meat fine Place in kettle and add 2 cups stock, ½ cup vinegar and salt and pepper Boil 30 minutes Pour into mold and set to cool Unmold after it has been refrigerated 12 hours Fat will rise to top and can be removed easily when cooled

National Broiler Council wants chicken recipes

COLUMBIA, SC - When America cooks outdoors, the aroma of chicken sizzling on backyard grills permeates the air from coast to coast

Chicken is a favorite for outdoor cooking all across the land, but how it is cooked often varies from region to region

To find the best recipes for grilling chicken in each area, the National Broiler Council is conducting a nationwide "How America Cooks Chicken Outdoors" survey Readers of newspaper food pages are asked to take part by submitting their own special recipes for barbecuing chicken outdoors

It might be an heirloom mustard or tomato base recipe dating back to the days of the Old South (the controversy continues there over which flavor is best). Or a zesty green chilies or jalapeno pepper recipe which crossed the border from Mexico to become a Southwest favorite

In the Northeast, clambakes on the beach (or in the backyard) usually include a layer of chicken cooked along with delicacies from the sea, corn and other vegetables The West Coast also has its own special way to barbecue chicken, frequently with light sauces or marinades flavored with wines or fruits of the region.

Your own specialty might be "just you" or a combination or variation of any of the above

Send your favorite chicken barbecue recipe to: National Broiler Council, P.O. Box 5806, Columbia, SC 29250. Include a stamped, self-addressed, business size envelope and you will receive the pamphlet, "Chicken: Great on the Grill," which contains other recipes for cooking chicken outdoors.

Tiny towns make up Texas west of the Pecos

WASHINGTON – "We pioneered this place in 1935," said Sammie Bramblett, standing in the dusty backyard of her blufftop ranch, looking across the broad Rio Grande valley toward Mexico.

"At age 74 she lives alone at the end of the longest dead-end road in all Texas," writes Griffin Smith Jr., who stood in her backyard and observed, "There was no other human habitation as far as the eye could see."

To reach the nearest grocery store, Mrs. Bramblett must drive 86 miles round-trip, and her ranch still has no telephone. A two-way radio is rigged so that incoming calls make the car horn blow.

Handy with Pistol

Smith asked her if she was ever afraid. "I've got a pistol, and I know how to use it," she replied.

In Texas west of the Pecos River, lots of people have pistols, and they know how to use them. Smith spent several weeks last fall exploring the huge area, and found it to be "among the last truly idiosyncratic parts of the United States, and its people... a tough, old-fashioned breed, secure in their convictions and self-sufficient in their ways, delighted to be left alone."

In order to seek out dozens of "people for whom solitude is the basic fact of life," he maneuvered his four-wheel-drive vehicle through canyons, mountains, and desert flats

"Spanish explorers called it the despoblado-- the unpopulated place," Smith writes. "Texans who speak today of the Trans-Pecos or, more loosely, the Big Bend country, mean this same rugged quarter. Though it embraces nine counties and part of a tenth, together the size of South Carolina, it is home to just 55,000 inhabitants, excluding El Paso."

Drawing on his experiences in the region, Smith observes:

– "Redford and nearby Presidio are farther from a commercial airport than anywhere else in the lower 48 states."

– "Candelaria... is so small that the church celebrates Mass only every other week."

Wasteful Torrents

– "The search for water is the one abiding constant of life.. When it rains, water runs off with wasteful havoc. The proud Pecos highway bridge near Langtry was 50 feet above the river, but a 20-inch downpour one ight in 1954 obliterated it beneath an 86-foot-high wall of water. In the Trans-Pecos, fortune smiles with bared teeth."

– "Fort Davis... is the highest town in Texas at 4,900 feet: conservative, chilly, a bit straitlaced. The courthouse has turnstiles to prevent stray cattle from wan-

Highway-loving cowboys whoop and holler as they take a Sunday trot around the West Texas town of Van Horn. The only way station of consequence for 175 miles on Interstate 10, Van Horn serves long-distance travelers who need to buy gas, have a drink or stretch their legs at a bus station.

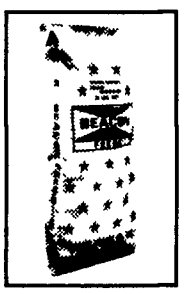
DEAL WITH THE LEADERS IN FORAGE PRE-SERVATIVE PRODUCTS
THE PERFECT COMBINATION... BEACON FAST DRY AND BEACON HAY PRE-SERV

Field-drying forage should be this easy.

The longer legume forage lies in windrows drying, the more it loses weight, protein, nutritious leafs, and digestibility.

That's money lost.

Dry it faster. With Beacon Fast-Dry Forage Conditioner.



You'll get better forage — and more of it — out of the field faster. You'll also reduce yellowing of new growth, crop loss, and damage to the forage by weather and equipment.

ALSO AVAILABLE:
- Beco-Lac - stabilized source of micro-organisms, the guaranteed live lacto bacillus silage preserve.
- Beacon Liquid and Dry Silage Preserve.
- Beacon Hay Pre-Serv.

ROBBED AGAIN?

Reduce shrinkage and energy loss with Beacon Silage Pre-Serv.*

Beacon Pre-Serv has a consistent formula of organic acids — natural aids to silage conversion — that encourage bacteria already present in the silage to produce excellent low heat fermentation of forages, so you get more hay crop silage for feeding.

University tests of Pre-Serv treated silage stored in a bunker silo achieve: 8.64% more dry matter, 9.3% more energy, and 6.3% more protein.

So don't be robbed of digestible nutrients — be rewarded with more milk from your cows! Use highly effective Beacon Pre-Serv... liquid or dry. It's another way to Bank on Beacon.

dering off the street and into the halls of justice."

– "In 1859 John Butterfield's stage traveled from the Pecos River in El Paso in 55 hours. Now sleek buses cover the same distance in less than six. But travelers still stop for fuel and refreshment at Van Horn, the only town of consequence for 175 miles on Interstate 10."

– "Mexican-American influence is on the rise. Six counties now have Hispanic majorities. But the ethnic transformation is less a matter of numbers than of participation–social, political, and economic–by people who once stayed on the periphery."

The ghost town of Terlingua, Smith writes, has been described as "the farthest you can go without getting anywhere." Smith drove that distance to visit the annual Wick Fowler Memorial World Championship Chili Cook-off.

For two days each November, a "portable village" sprouts in the desert. At what he calls the "mardi gras of the country and western set," Smith joined 8,000 other spectators:

Pungent Aromas Arise

"There were people dressed as chili peppers, as monks, as locomotives. There was the Best Little Chili House in Texas. And from many of the simmering caldrons the smells were, well, disturbing.

Smith drove away from Terlingua, eastward into the wild country of Big Bend National Park, the scenic heart of the Trans-Pecos. "As I drove through its vast silences, the uproar of the chili cook-off receded like a thunderstorm. This was landscape reduced to its essentials, surface and horizon and sky. A love of such land, with its solitude and its spare, sudden beauty, and no less a love of personal independence–the chance for a man to do as he pleases, unwatched and unbossed–make the people of the Trans-Pecos what they are."

Montgomery homemakers offer scholarship

CREAMERY – The Montgomery County Extension Homemakers Clubs are now taking applications for the annual Homemakers Scholarship offered to an outstanding student in a field related to home economics.

The $250 scholarship will be awarded to a student who is a resident on Montgomery County, and entering his or her junior or senior year of college in September of 1986. The student may attend any college or university and must show academic excellence as well as financial need.

Applications are available from the Montgomery County Extension Service, Box 20, Creamery, Pennsylvania 19430, phone 489-4315. Deadline is June 1, 1986.

fertilizer can get your corn crop off to a super start:

It has a high concentration of water-soluble Phosphorus that gets to young seedlings quickly. Helps plants establish a good root system – the starting point for top yields. Its quick-acting and long-lasting Nitrogen team up to feed the young plants for full yield potential, continually from sprouting to harvest.

This is the Starter Special that corn growers know from good experience. It's highly effective as a banded starter. And it's SAFE . . . no chance of ammonia damage to tender, young seedlings when used as a "pop up" and applied directly with the seed at 50 lbs./acre

How can we fit UNIPEL 13-34-10 into your corn fertility program?

Penn Manor captures Lancaster FFA meat judging contest

LANCASTER – Penn Manor once again won the Lancaster County FFA meat judging contest, withstanding some strong competition from a determined Elizabethtown team.

Lead by fourth-place finisher Jeannette Aument, Penn Manor amassed 813 points, three more than the runnerup-team from Elizabethtwon

Overall individual winner was Jeff Craig from Solanco, who scored 310 points, beating second-place Sheldon Heisey from Elizabethtown by 21 points Eric Connelly from Warwick was third with 288 points.

Other top finishers included Steve Heisey, Elizabethtown, fifth, with 281 points; Phil Fullerton, Elizabethtown, sixth with 277; Jay Lownsberry, Penn Manor, seventh with 268 points; Brian Byerly, Warwick, eighth with 263 points; Dave Firestone, Warwick, ninth with 259 points; and Andy Spahr, Penn Manor, tenth with 258 points.

In the team rankings, Warwick finished third with 797 points, Solanco was fourth with 728 and Lampeter-Strasburg was fifth with 681.

The competition was held at Kunzler Meats plant in Lancaster, under the supervision of Pequea Valley FFA advisor Clair Witmer and Kunzler's beef supervisor, Jerry Gregg.

Black sheep are no outcasts on Australian breeder's farm

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

LANCASTER — Although black sheep carry a negative connotation, for Cyril Lieschke they mean specialized business.

Lieschke, an Australian breeder of colored sheep, was in Lancaster recently promoting his colored fleeces, and giving an insider's view of sheep farming in Australia. With over 2,200 colored sheep on his 1,200-acre ranch, Lieschke is the world's largest breeder of colored sheep. The average colored flock is about 30 head.

According to Lieschke, being a breeder of colored sheep makes him unpopular with the Australian government which still promotes white sheep as the only acceptable wool producers. This attitude stems from the desire of processors to have wool with no impurities, including string, cigarette butts, or colored strands.

Lieschke relates an incident in 1970 when a shipment of wool was sent to Japan, and an entire carding machine had to be cleaned because of one small swatch of colored wool in the shipment. Japan billed Australia, which in turn fined sheep farmers, and the campaign for pure wool goes on with a vengeance.

Australia is the largest exporter of wool in the world, with 180 million sheep raised mostly for wool production. Lieschke noted that Japan is the largest purchaser, followed by the European Economic Community. The United States ranks 12th as a customer for Australian wool.

By tradition black sheep are slaughtered as soon as they are born, but as a child Lieschke always liked the black sheep on his father's ranch. Although he disapproved, his father allowed him to raise several as wethers. When he had amassed 300 pounds of wool, he traveled with his father to a wool market. His father's white wool sold for 147 cents a pound, and his black wool sold for 245 cents. That was in 1952 when Lieschke made his decision to breed colored sheep, and his resolution has remained firm.

He moved his sheep to an adjoining ranch which his father purchased for him, because his family wasn't thrilled with the thought of raising black sheep. For the basis of his expanded flock, Lieschke traveled throughout Australia, purchasing the few black sheep that were available. Lieschke's family had emigrated to Australia from Germany in 1838, and had lived on its present location since 1890.

In natural selection, a black sheep will occur in every 1,000 births. He claims that rams with a black tongue will give black progeny, and uses this as one criteria for selecting breeding stock. He raises primarily Merino, Corriedale and Leicester sheep.

Fleeces of older sheep become lighter, so Lieschke says he cannot promise that a fleece from the same sheep will be the same year after year. He noted that sheep are in the prime of their lives at two and three years of age. He commented that it is uneconomical to raise sheep after they are six years old unless they are champions.

Lieschke makes it clear that he feels there is room for both him and local breeders, and he does not want to put himself in direct competition with anyone producing wool locally. With over six million hand spinners and weavers in this country and just 3.8 million sheep, Lieschke says, "I am convinced there is a market here." Numbers of sheep in this country are down from 5.2 million in 1979.

Lieschke hires a shearer for three weeks of every year, and asks him to limit his output to about 120 sheep per day because that's as much wool as he can handle. In Australia some shearers can do 300 sheep a day, with the record being 440 sheep, averaging a minute per animal.

However, Lieschke's fleeces require some special attention. Each one is marked with the number of the sheep and is recorded individually. When he travels, he has samples of specific fleeces with him. In Australia, the fleeces are stored in plastic bags punched with holes so the fleece can breathe, and he says it can be kept five years if cared for properly. However, he replenishes the shelves in his barn-showroom every three months as fleeces are sold.

Cyril Lieschke makes a point as he speaks to the Lancaster Spinners and Weavers Guild during a recent meeting. He is wearing a hand-woven sweater which tells the story of his life — one black sheep surrounded by many white sheep.

Lieschke also carries with him hand woven samples of wool, showing what certain colors will look like when made into a finished product. The fleeces themselves are shipped directly to the home of purchasers, and cost $4 per pound.

Periodic droughts in Australia cause concern within the sheep community Lieschke explained. He gave examples of years in which the sheep were shorn and then killed because there was no feed for them. He lost a flock of 800 because he had the sheep shorn during a drought and there was a slight rain which caused them to develop pneumonia.

On his ranch, rain is collected into a series of ponds and dams throughout the ranch, with the largest being 22 feet deep and about 400 by 400 feet wide. Water for domestic use is collected from roofs and stored in tanks. Lieschke says there are no 45-minute showers taken in Australia, and toilets are in separate buildings close to the house so that they can use pond water for flushing instead of the pure domestic water.

Annual rainfall in a normal year in southeast Australia, which is home to Lieschke, averages 25 to 30 inches, although 100 miles to the west that average drops to less than 10 inches. The coldest night in the winter would be 30°F, with average daily winter temperatures at 60°F. In the summer, however, temperatures soar to 115°F during the day, with no humidity. Summer nights average about 65°F.

Lieschke manages his farm entirely alone, but shares a combine/harvester with a brother. He relies on a motorcycle and Australian Kelpie dogs to work the sheep. He explained that trees are planted "all over the farm" for shade for the sheep, and the farm has about 50 fields. Sheep live on the clover and rye grass combination in pastures. Wheat production averages about 65 bushels to the acre. They also produce a lot of hay, using both conventional balers and large round balers.

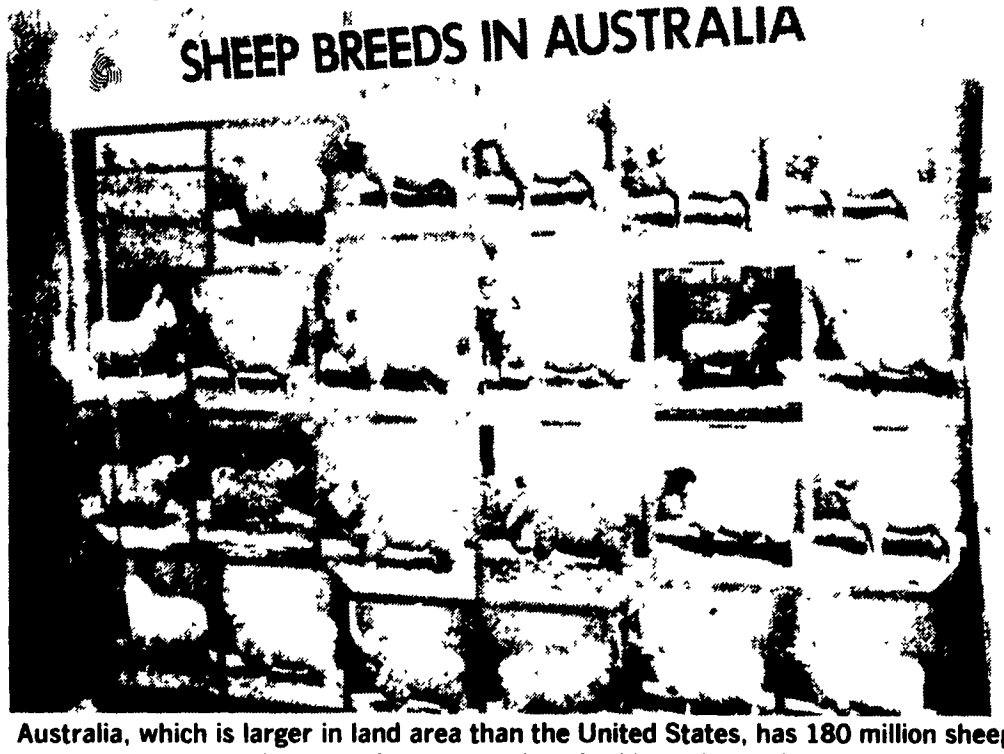
Cyril Lieschke points out his home on a map of Australia. He resides on a 1,200-acre ranch near Henty, in the southeastern part of the country.

Lieschke noted that sheep are in the fields 365 days a year, with lambs born in July and August in the fields. He noted that there are few predators in Australia, except for an occasional red fox and black crows

It is compulsory to dip sheep 30 days after shearing to prevent external parasites. Fines for noncompliance can be as high as $10,000, and a one-year quarantine. He said external parasites can decimate a herd.

Lieschke is making a marathon 71-day trip across the United States and Canada, giving 86 lectures and taking 60 plane trips in an effort to "learn what you are doing with my wool." It is not his first trip to the United States, but it is his most intensive in trying to establish a market for his colored wool which is not encouraged in the domestic market.

These colored fleeces are what brought Cyril Lieschke to the United States. He wants to increase his export market for the fleeces.



Australia, which is larger in land area than the United States, has 180 million sheep, raised primarily for its large wool export market. A wide variety of breeds can be found there.

Junior Holstein Convention combines fun and education

BY MARTHA J. GEHRINGER

PITTSBURGH — The Junior Holstein Convention proved to be both fun and educational. The two were combined with the mock auction and the dairy bowl contest. The pure fun arrived in the form of a pizza and pool party, and the riverboat cruise where they joined the adults.

The dairy bowl contest senior division champions were from Berks County. This team won on a difficult set of questions over the Washington-Greene County team.

This contest was run by the Penn-State and West Virginia University's Dairy Science Clubs. There were seven junior teams and eight senior teams in the competition.

The top senior team from Berks County included, Mark Moser, Naomi Herbst, Doris Stump and Charlie Seidel. George Merrill coached this team to their victory.

The runner-up team from Washington-Greene County included, Steve Barchiesi, Devon Koralan, Gina Barchiesi, Cally Fava and Aaron Kojak.

A mock auction was held this year with recognition going to those teams which came closest to buying for the evaluated price. The juniors went through an actual bidding outside a sale ring using proper sale etiquette.

When the bidding was over the team of Jennifer Hummell, Sarah Dum, Beth Duncan and Corey Wolf were the ones with the sharpest eyes and received the junior award. The senior team that was recognized for smart buying included, John Stamy IV, C.E. Hubbard III, Leigh Ann Kimmell and Thad Sturgeon.

Scott, who does a little of everything at his family's farm, has seven registered Holsteins and enjoys showing at the fairs during the summer. To him, the fairs are a vacation. Eventually he plans to attend college for something dairy related.

Bridgette has been a member of the Junior Holstein Association for the past seven years. Her family has a herd of 45 registered cows. She is currently attending Spring Grove Area High School where she is very active in extra-curricular activities.

The distinguished junior members in the senior division were Luke Bowser, New Enterprise, and Sandra Moser, Bally.

Luke started in the Holstein business in 1977. He acquired his second Holstein from Obie Snider in exchange for his Honda motorcycle. He is presently working on his family's 278 acre farm, Dunnings View as a herdsman.

Sandra Moser was unable to attend the convention as she is currently a freshman at Loyola College in Baltimore, majoring in mass media creative writing. She has been a 4-H member for the past ten years. Last year she was a member of the dairy bowl team from Pennsylvania that took top honors at the National Dairy Bowl Championship in Louisville.

The Junior All-Pennsylvania Awards were also given out at this time. The winners for five and over - milk were: Susan Corbin, Reynoldsville; Scott Walrath, Milan; Cathleen Ohlinger, Mohrsville; Irene Benner, Millerstown; and Judith Vonada, Howard.

Winners in the five and over fat category were: Susan Corbin, Reynoldsville; Cathleen Ohlinger, Mohrsville; Jody Lynn Nesbit, Marchand; Irene Benner, Millerstown; and Scott Walrath, Milan.

The four year old milk winners were: Terry Branstetter, Jr., Tyrone; Todd Miller, Hamburg; Michael Carr, Somerset; Stephanie Corbin, Reynoldsville; and Willian Davis III, Troy.

The four year old fat category winners were: Terry Branstetter, Jr., Tyrone; Jeffrey Moon, Volant;

Calf, ice cream and cow path lead to success at Convention

BY MARTHA J. GEHRINGER

PITTSBURGH — Imagine 1,200 children following hoofprints on the floor, taking great care to step on each print. Imagine an eight foot sundae and a live calf in a mall and you'll have the basic idea of the mall promotion that was held in conjunction with the Holstein Convention last weekend.

The mall promotion, held next to the Sheraton in the Station Freight House Square, featured a cowpath which lead visitors to various displays concerning milk. This cowpath consisted of hoofprints laid on the floor starting at the "barn," parking garage where the sale animals were housed, and ending at the Springhouse Store where a live calf was housed for the weekend.

The students that visited were from the Pittsburgh area schools, grades K thru 3. They also entered a cow coloring contest, which was later judged and a award given to the grand champion.

The mall promotion was capped off by the building of an eight foot sundae. Construction materials for this giant sundae included 21, three gallon containers for a total of 63 gallons of vanilla ice cream that was stacked seven layers high.

It was covered with six gallons of Hershey's chocolate syrup, one gallon of butterscotch syrup, three pounds of maraschino cherries, and a dozen cans of whipped cream. This enormous treat was constructed by state dairy princess, Beth Heald, and several other local county dairy princesses.

They then dished it out to an estimated 1,000 shoppers in one and a half hours.

All the ingredients were donated. The ice cream was compliments of Alex B. Griest, Washington, and the Springhouse Dairy Store, owned by Sam and Bev Minor.

[illegible] Association's retiring president. The syrup was donated by Romeo and Sons, Uniontown, and the cherries were given by the Springhouse.

Sam Minor credits the idea for placing a calf outside their store to his wife, Bev Minor. Minor feels the promotion was excellent publicity for the convention and the dairy industry. Through the exhibits, demonstrations, and the cattle the promotion generated a great deal of appeal with the media and Pittsburgh people.

This promotion succeeded in bringing the farm and its number one product, milk, to the people of Pittsburgh in a way they won't soon forget.

Mid-Atlantic Workshop for handicapped set for March 7

NEWARK, Del. – The second annual Mid-Atlantic Workshop for Disabled Individuals and Their Families in Rural and Agricultural Communities is scheduled for March 7 and 8 at the Sheraton Inn, Frederick, Md. – about 35 miles south of Gettysburg, Pa., on U.S. Highway 15. The two-day event is sponsored by the cooperative extension services at land-grant universities in several mid-Atlantic states.

The main purpose of the workshop is to bring together rural families with physically or mentally disabled members for specialized instruction and exchange of ideas.

"This year the workshop has a topnotch program," says Ron Jester, University of Delaware extension safety specialist. "Officials are hoping for a good turnout."

General seminar topics will include stress management, adapted clothing, customized farm machinery and buildings, computers for the handicapped, legislative proposals, personal attitudes, and alcohol and drug abuse. In addition there will be panel discussions of topics of interest as well as commercial exhibits of products and services that are useful to the handicapped.

As with all cooperative extension events, the workshop is open to everyone regardless of race, color, sex, handicap, age or national origin. Advance registration is required. A $15 fee includes two continental breakfasts and educational materials.

For more information or to register contact the cooperative extension office in Newark (451-2506), Dover (736-1448) or Georgetown (856-7303).

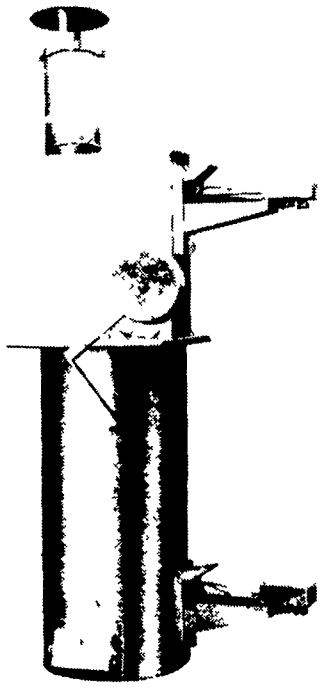
SHENANDOAH INCINERATORS - A SANITARY ALTERNATIVE FOR ON FARM DISPOSAL

To Help Prevent the Spread of Disease

The sanitary way to get rid of animal carcasses is with a Shenandoah incinerator. It's pollution controlled and convenient to use. It's also extra efficient because we've lined the burning chambers, and in some models even the afterburning chambers, with one and a quarter inches of refractory cement. That keeps the heat up and the energy costs down.



Choose among eight easy-to-install smoke and odor controlled models. You even have the option of burning gas or oil.

Ask your local Shenandoah dealer about efficient, inexpensive incinerators. You'll find out how our bright ideas in farm equipment can mean a bright spot in your day. And still leave a green spot in your wallet.

Have You Heard?

Bigger Can Be Better

If queen size means more to you than petite or junior when you shop for clothes, what do you choose to look your best.

Certainly now just loose-fitting, dark-colored clothing. The days when the fashion industry ignored larger women are over Manufacturers are making more styles—and more stylish clothing—for bigger women than ever before Of course not everyone looks good in everything, and here are some pointers for looking better, not bigger!

• Avoid bulky fabrics. Choose smooth, natural-looking fabrics that stay pressed.

• All white – and that old standby, all black – can make you appear larger Soft colors and jewel tones are flattering to full figures

• Prints and plaids are okay, if colors are subtle and harmonizing, and you stay away from small-and-fussy- or large-and-bold patterns.

• Choose designs that lead the eye up and down—not around If your dress doesn't have vertical lines, create them with a long scarf, or long heads, or a jacket worn open

• Choose simple, loose-fitting styles that suggest rather than define –the body shape. But avoid styles that are too loose—fullness exaggerates size

Children Can Learn Through Foods

The foods children eat have a direct effect on their growth, development, behavior, and ability to learn.

Early positive experiences with food lay a firm ground for future eating habits It is important that children learn about nutrition and the role it plays in life Children first need to realize that the energy they need to jump, run, prance, and grow comes from the foods they eat

Stress the importance of foods at every opportunity Expose children to a variety of foods, and explain why they need to eat many different foods to develop properly

Food experiences at home can help develop a positive attitude toward foods. Food experiences also teach and reinforce many concepts

For instance, letting children help buy and prepare foods can give them a better understanding of quantities and measurements—a lesson in mathematics

Children can also learn to distinguish colors, shapes, and textures using foods Apples are red, bananas are yellow, and blueberries are blue – the three primary colors. Banana skins are smooth and uniform, while broccoli flowers are not.

Children can learn new language skills when preparing foods. A fruit and vegetable smorgasbord can provide experiences that reinforce smells, tastes and terms such as sour lemons or tart apples, squeeze oranges or knead dough.

Children can learn good manners and consideration of others at the table. As children observe adult behavior while eating they too learn to share with and to respect others Food experiences can provide a wide variety range of learning activities for children every day

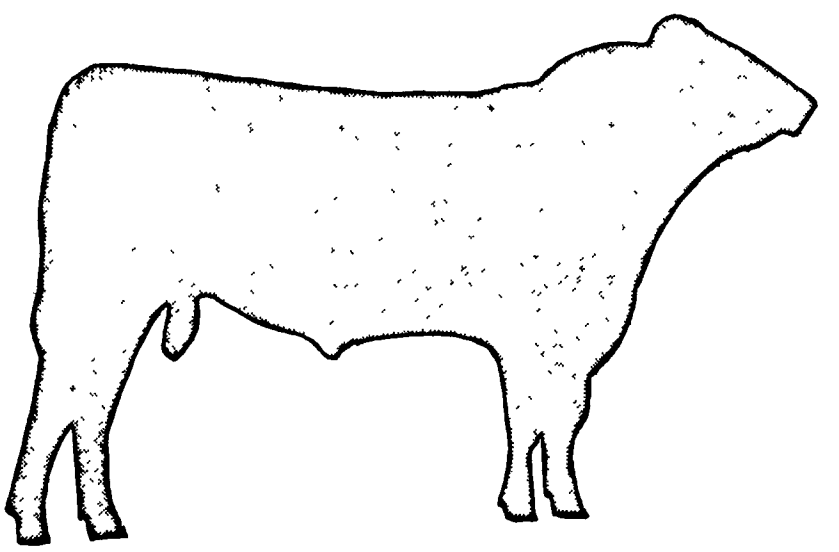
CAN YOU PICTURE THE PERFECT COW OR BULL?


At Langdon Farms, we picture the perfect Simmental Bull and Cow and breed toward that point. We do not get involved in cycles or fads. We have set our goals and set them high. They were set at the start of Langdon and have been maintained through the years.... Easy calving, efficient animals that are structurally sound and can perform in any environment.
Cattle that will put beef on the hoof and put money in the pocket. That is our goal and for the sake of the Industry it should be everyones goal.
So if you are interested in Simmental breeding stock, come have a look...and lets talk Cattle.

Are You Letting Stray Voltage Milk Your Profits?

You could be and you might not even know it. University studies show it may make your herd difficult to handle, increase mastitis, and ultimately lead to an overall decrease in your production and profits.

Using computer technology, our survey documents the level of stray voltage and shows you when and where it occurs on your farm.

From the survey report you can determine if stray voltage is milking your profits. If it is, Blackburn has the only guaranteed method of reducing it from both on and off-farm sources.

When we make it so easy to detect and reduce stray voltage it makes sense to find out if your milk output and herd health is less than it could be.

To learn more about stray voltage and its effects call for our free brochure or arrange for a detection survey. We'll put your farm to the test. And put your mind at ease.

Md. farmers cautioned

ANNAPOLIS, Md. – Maryland farmers will soon be purchasing and seeding Red Clover. As a precautionary measure, these farmers are being warned to avoid improperly labeled seed.

"Farmers anticipating seeding Red Clover seed this spring should make sure the seed they buy is properly tested and labeled," warned Malcolm Sarna, of the Maryland Department of Agriculture. "Don't rely on friendship when buying seed!" Sarna continued, "It could be contaminated with noxious weeds including Canada thistle and dodder. Heating or mechanical damage could result in low germination.

Farmers planning to sell Red Clover can have it tested by mailing a one-pound sample to: Maryland Department of Agriculture, Turf and Seed Section, 50 Harry S. Truman Parkway, Annapolis, MD 21401.

A schedule of testing charges is also available from the above address The results of this test will enable the seller to label the seed in accordance with the Maryland Seed Law

Trade head to investigate ethanol 'loophole' charge

WASHINGTON – Responding swiftly to charges leveled by Chuck Grassley (R-Iowa), and backed by seven other midwest Senators, United States Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter has convened an investigation to determine whether foreign ethanol producers are exploiting U.S. trade laws.

Current law levies a 60-cent-per-gallon import duty on all ethanol shipped to the U.S. A loophole, however, allows foreign producers to mix ethanol with a small percentage of some other chemical, thus permitting the fuel to enter this country duty-free.

Grassley had written Yeutter February 3rd, claiming Brazil was preparing some 200 million gallons of duty-free benzene-ethanol for import to this country. "Emergency action must be taken," he said, "if we are to prevent this blatant exploitation of U.S. trade law." Backing him up were farm state Senators Dole (R-Kansas), Zorinsky (D-Neb.), Boshwitz (R-Minn.), Abdnor (R-S.Dak.), Exon (D-Neb.), Durenburger (R-Minn.), Dixon (D-Ill.), and Lugar (R-Ind.).

Yeutter's call for an investigation today, Grassley said, "is just what the doctor ordered." The review process should take about five weeks, which means from a practical standpoint, little benzene-ethanol will be shipped to the U.S. until Brazil can be sure what action will be taken. "By that time," he said, "I am confident the loophole will be closed."

This is not the first time Grassley has successfully led such an effort. Brazil and other ethanol-producing countries have twice sought to circumvent import fees by mixing ethanol with small percentages of other duty-free chemicals.

Last fall the Brazilians sought to import as much as 600 million gallons of ethanol mixed with toulene. Grassley, in turn, forged Senate passage of an amendment ensuring toulene-ethanol could not escape the 60-cent duty.

Though his provision failed to gain the full support of Congress, its success in the Senate caused enough uncertainty and confusion in Brazil that much of the toulene-ethanol never made it to the U.S. before the Trade Commission placed a duty on it. As a result of his role in stalling those imports, which saved corn-farmers millions of dollars, Grassley was later chosen by the ethanol industry as "Ethanol Man of the Year."

Pleased with today's announcement by Yuetter, Grassley said that "once again, quick action has protected farmers and the U.S. ethanol industry from the slick attorneys hatching these import schemes."

"Yeutter's 'take-charge' attitude is essential if we are to prevent exploitation and violation of U.S. trade law," he added. "Where domestic ethanol production is concerned, industry leaders and corn-farmers deserve nothing less."

Ag exec says U.S. must pressure other countries

MIAMI BEACH – A tougher trade policy and a substantial increase in the Food for Peace program can "end the depression that's sweeping like a prairie fire across our agricultural heartland," the chief executive officer of one of the nation's largest agricultural exporting companies told officials of U S farmer cooperatives here

The U.S. government must convince "mercantile governments" that their policies of dumping surplus agricultural products in world markets at below-cost prices "are not in anyone's best interests," according to Dwayne O. Andreas, chairman of Archer Daniels Midland Company, Decatur, Illinois.

And despite budget pressures, the government should double the $2.5 billion now planned for the Food for Peace program for the next five years, he added, because it would save $4.5 billion in price support expenditures and mean expanded farm export markets "and jobs for workers in processing, trucking, shipping and related industries." That, in turn, would generate $300 million in new tax revenue

"The only way to negotiate free trade," Andreas said, "is to use the predators' own weapons against them."

Charging that the "mercantile economies" dominate the world trading system and are "pushing American farmers out of business (and) destroying third world economies," Andreas called for aggressive implementation of new export assistance authority in the farm bill and more use of "mixed credits" to help exporters.

One of the recommendations of the President's Task Force on International Private Enterprise, which Andreas chairs, "mixed credits" are used by many countries to combine easy credit terms and aid to foster their exports. While American producers and exporters can't compete by borrowing at commercial rates and financing their buyers at lower rates, he said, "the mercantiles do it every day because they are governments; they don't have to worry about profit and loss, about shareholders or banks."

The requirement in the farm bill for $2 billion worth of government-owned surpluses to be used to encourage exports, and a Reagan Administration request for $300 million for mixed credits, make "a good start," he said. "It sends a powerful message to unfair competitors that we aren't going to roll over and play dead. We're going to fight for our markets, and if the other fellow won't fight fair, then we'll just have to fight with his weapon."

An expanded Food for Peace program, he said, not only would be good business for U.S. farmers and industry, but also would help the U.S. fulfill its "moral and charitable duty to the world's hungry."

Improvements in the Food for Peace program mandated by the farm bill "may not go as far as our task force recommended," Andreas noted, "but it does put some muscle into our efforts on behalf of free enterprise worldwide."

While the U.S. should not try to introduce free trade unilaterally, he urged Washington to look at some of its own barriers to trade. He said Soviet Leader Mikhail Gorbachev last month told him the Soviets have "a long catalog of complaints about America's trade barriers and our reliability as a trading partner."

He said he is hopeful "some of those barriers will come down and we can start doing serious business with the Russians; they represent an enormous market for America's agricultural and industrial production."

How to get a good turnover.

Our powerful 5HP and 7HP tillers are easy to start, thanks to Automatic Decompression. And they're easy to operate, with all the controls conveniently located on the handles. Both are self-propelled with 2 forward and 1 reverse gear, and have rugged Honda 4-stroke engines with quiet, efficient mufflers. The only hard part with a Honda tiller is deciding which one to get.

Warm-season grass booklet available

ANKENY, Iowa — Supplementing cool-season forages with warm-season grasses can enhance livestock production and provide other conservation benefits in the northeastern and midwestern regions of the United States.

These benefits, along with guidelines for establishing warm-season grass pastures, are explained in a new publication, "Warm-Season Grasses: Balancing Forage Programs in the Northeast and Southern Corn Belt," from the Soil Conservation Society of America.

The booklet also explains how warm-season grasses can be used for wildlife plantings, reclamation, and other conservation uses.

Single copies of the 35-page publication are $5. Orders should be sent to SCSA, 7515 N.E. Ankeny Road, Ankeny, Iowa 50021-9764.

THE POUNCE® GUARANTEE.

FMC guarantees that Pounce® 3.2 EC insecticide will control cutworms or true armyworms in field corn when used pre-emergent and according to label directions. If Pounce fails to control cutworms or true armyworms, FMC will replace the Pounce used wherever control was not achieved, or reimbruse the grower for the purchase price. See your dealer or custom applicator for the details of the guarantee.

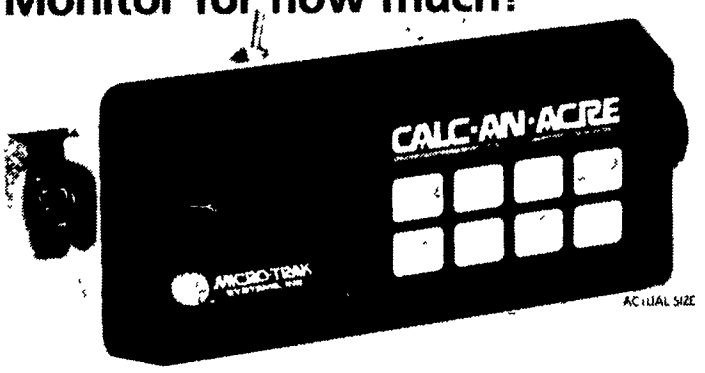
A Fully Digital Monitor for how much?



Under $200.00!
But don't let the low price fool you . . .

CALC AN ACRE is a state of the art acre counter that accurately calculates and displays acreage with the touch of a button. It incorporates a dual counting system that makes it possible to reset and record individual fields while maintaining a running total of area worked. CALC AN ACRE is also a digital speedometer that provides true ground speed.

The compact console features a five digit vacuum fluorescent readout and sealed control panel with touch sensitive function keys.

From its ease of operation to its reliable day in day out performance CALC AN ACRE proves itself to be one of the best instrumentation values ever!

CALC-AN-ACRE includes:

The electronic console with adjustable mounting bracket complete cabling and installation hardware and a magnetic speed sensor thumbscrew mounting kit for all farm equipment.

30-Day Money Back Guarantee - 1 Year Warranty

If CALC AN ACRE fails 30 days if you are not completely satisfied return it to point of purchase for refund as long as it is unused.

If unit fails from defective workmanship within one year from date of purchase it will be repaired or replaced free of charge.

How it Pays Off

CALC AN ACRE can be used in a variety of situations that can help make your operation more productive and profitable.

- Verify Chemical and Fertilizer Application Rates
- Set and Maintain Correct Ground Speed
- Measure and Monitor Test Plots
- Perform Yield Checks During the Harvest Season
- Maximize Tractor Performance by Monitoring Slippage
- Know the Exact Acres Covered When Leasing Equipment
- Keep an Accurate Acre Count When Performing Custom Work

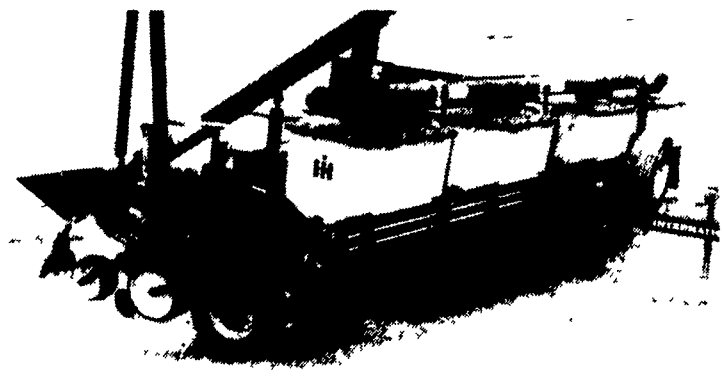
KASCO

We Have Models Available For All Common Planters



KASCO AUGER SYSTEMS
Install On Most Planters

Due to the difference in make up of planters, size of boxes and distance between boxes NO TWO MODELS OF AUGERS ARE ALIKE.

Kasco fertilizer augers, both vertical and horizontal, are powered with a hydraulic motor on each auger.

Tube is 6" diameter with safety shields over each set of holes. Hoppers also have safety shields over auger flighting.

HORIZONTAL AUGERS FROM $800
VERTICAL AUGERS FROM $650

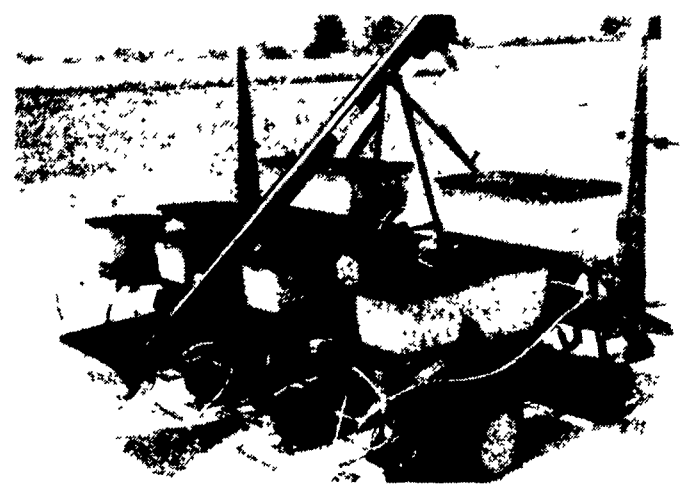
SAVE BIG $ $ $ ON BULK FERTILIZER

Order Today For Spring Delivery Of Fill Attachments

KASCO MODEL W-AUGERS

Kasco model W-auger for four row planters (two fertilizer boxes) is designed to take the material from a gravity box (with no additional auger) and deliver it to the two fertilizer boxes. It is powered by a hydraulic motor on the top end. Two hoses from the tractor hydraulic system is all that is needed to run the auger.

Kasco model W-augers will install on most four row planters and will eliminate the lifting of heavy fertilizer bags. Also the savings of using bulk fertilizer will soon pay for the auger.



MODEL W-AUGERS FOR
4 ROW PLANTERS FROM $680

Krause Plow Company pioneered the Rockflex™ disc, the Flexwing™ disc, the Landsman™ conservation tillage machine. Now they have introduced the Landsaver™ coulter chisel plow. The Landsaver™ combines excellent trash cutting characteristics with superior trash clearance. You can now chisel in the worst conditions without plugging the plow. NEW Spring Reset Clamps provide extra clearance.

2900 Gal. Tank w/Easy Loader

NOW (Patent Pending)

You can haul liquid Manure all day without getting off the Tractor Seat using the SLURRY BUGGY Easy Loader

1.) Back up to pit or lagoon. Lower easy loader (boom) from tractor (by hydraulic)
2.) Engage PTO Switch pump to vacuum
3.) Float level indicator shows when tank is full
4.) Stop PTO Raise boom and head for the field
5.) In field. Switch pump to pressure. Start PTO. Open Valve and unload.

A liquid manure spreader that loads and unloads and has no chains, bearings, fans, augers, or moving parts that touch manure.

For more information call or write.

ATTENTION FARMERS!

Don't Let Your Silo Deteriorate

Extend the life of your old silo . . . with ShotCrete from Lancaster Silo!

RESURFACES INTERIORS:

- Coats the silo's interior
- Protects feed in storage
- Durable, tough, acid-resistant
- Increases useful life
- Economical

Before . . . The silo's interior with plaster damaged and stave exposed

After . . . The surface is reconditioned, and a new, thick, tough surface will protect stored feed.

REPAIRS HOLES:

- Repairs even large holes
- Up to twice the strength of the original stave
- Rapid application
- Durable surface

Before . . . A hole is worn completely through the silo wall

After . . . With the hole repaired by ShotCrete and a new surface applied, the silo is ready for years of use.

EXTENDS USEFUL LIFE:

- Support for old foundations
- Special repairs can be made . . . quickly and economically
- Little or no forming needed
- Stronger than the original

Before . . . The bottom part of the staves are completely worn away

After . . The ShotCrete System repairs and replaces the missing structure.

When you think your silo is beyond repair, Think of ShotCrete

BLADEX IN NO-TILL. BURNS WEEDS DOWN. KEEPS 'EM DOWN.

No other corn herbicide can match the 2-way killing action of Bladex® herbicide in heavy crop residue.

First, Bladex burns down young weeds (and saves money by ending the need for costly contact herbicides.) Then, through its root uptake action, Bladex provides residual control of later germinating weeds. Including tough grasses like foxtails and fall panicum that can germinate in surface trash and escape the shoot action of ordinary grass herbicides.

And unlike hit-or-miss contact/residual treatments, Bladex and Bladex combinations deliver more consistent burndown performance in no-till, especially when applied in liquid N carriers. Plus, dependable residual control under varying weed, weather and soil conditions.

Believe in Bladex for no-till. Ask your dealer about the Bladex Performance Agreement.

Shell stands behind it.

Burdette named '86 'Cattleman of the Year'

BY JACK HUBLEY

BOILING SPRINGS — Honors and praise flowed at the Annual Cattlemen's Banquet at the Allenberry Resort in Boiling Springs last Friday night. Held in conjunction with the three-day Cattlemen's Conference and Spring Fling, the banquet is the association's opportunity to name a new queen and to cite those who have made significant contributions to the beef industry.

This year PCA presented an Industry Service Award and a Seedstock Producer Award, in addition to its traditional Cattleman of the Year Award.

Even though Dr. Lester Burdette served on the award selection committee, he had no idea that his colleagues had selected the top cattleman without his approval. Penn State's professor of animal science extension was taken aback when his name was announced as recipient of this year's Cattleman of the Year Award.

A well-known figure throughout the Pennsylvania livestock industry, Burdette has logged nearly three decades of service with the Cooperative Extension.

Dr. Burdette grew up on a general farm in Mercer County, and earned his bachelor's, master's and Ph.D. degrees in Animal Industry from Penn State.

"I've gotten a lot of satisfaction working in the youth area," Burdette said, noting that his approach to educating young livestock producers has always been commercially oriented.

In addition to his many youth-oriented activities, Burdette has served on the state Bureau of Animal Industry's Animal Health Committee and has been an advisor to PCA, the Meat Animal Evaluation Center in State College and various beef breed associations.

The parents of four children, Dr. Burdette and his wife Joann reside near Pine Grove Mills.

The association's Seedstock Producer of the Year is Galen Dreibelbis of Nittany Farms, State College. A native of State College, Dreibelbis lives less than a quarter of a mile from his birthplace and has been raising beef cattle on his own since 1970. He currently owns a herd of 100 crossbred Chianina cows. Dreibelbis also serves as president of both the Northeast Chianina Association and the Pennsylvania Ag Advisory Council.

Honored with the Industry Service Award was Glenn Hart, vice president of Walter M. Dunlap and Sons of Lancaster. Born and raised in the cattle business, Hart has been with Dunlaps for 18 years.

Last year's Cattlemen's Queen, Melanie Hemminger, capped a busy year of beef promotion by crowning PCA's Queen for 1986. Tioga County's Becky Painter became the new Cattlemen's Queen after edging out two other finalists from Beaver and Lawrence Counties.

The daughter of Norman and Marie Painter of Elkland, the 21-year-old Miss Painter is a junior Animal Production major at Penn State.

Mary Shick, 20, of New Castle (Lawrence Co.) was named first runnerup. The daughter of Joseph and Letitia Shick, Mary is also a junior at Penn State where she is majoring in Agribusiness Management and Animal Production.

Taking second runnerup honors was Sharon King, the daughter of Glenn and Barbara King of Monaca (Beaver Co.) She also attends Penn State, where she is a freshman Animal Bioscience major.

Friday's banquet capped a day of beef seminars presented by university and beef industry specialists. The banquet's featured speaker was Wyoming humorist Jerry Palen, author of the popular comic strip "Stampede."

Glenn Hart (left) received the Industry Service Award, and Galen Dreibelbis was named Seedstock Producer of the Year.

Kansas Cattleman shows how to eliminate lazy bulls

BY JACK HUBLEY

BOILING SPRINGS — If Kansas rancher Henry Gardiner has his way, a lot more bulls will be shaping up or shipping out to the slaughterhouse.

The president of the Kansas Beef Improvement Federation, Gardiner was one of the featured speakers at the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Conference and Spring Fling last weekend at the Allenberry Resort in Boiling Springs.

Gardiner runs a family purebred and commercial beef operation on his 12,000-acre ranch in southwestern Kansas near Dodge City. About 7,000 acres are in grass, with the remaining 5,000 devoted to wheat and hay production.

The cattleman relies heavily on artificial insemination to breed his 830 Angus cows. He also relies heavily on pencil and paper to make sure that his operation is not only paying its way but turning a profit.

Gardiner takes his business seriously and feels that any herd bull worth his weight in quarter-pounders should do likewise. One way to weed out the underachievers is to subject all bulls to a libido test to measure their serving capacity, he says.

While there was a time when natural selection kept the number of lazy bulls to a minimum, artificial insemination tends to checkmate this process, says Gardiner. With AI producing one-fourth of the country's bulls at present, the potential for commercial breeders to get stuck with a well-bred "lemon" is very real.

"At the present time, registered breeders have no way of knowing the libido score or serving capacity of their AI sires," Gardiner points out. The cattleman feels that a libido test developed by an Australian veterinarian named Mike Blockey just might be the solution to the problem.

In his test, Blockey pens four heifers in breeding chutes, then releases five sexually excited bulls and counts the number of times that each bull breeds a heifer in a 20-minute period. Bulls breeding only once or not at all are given a "low" libido score, those that breed two to three times are scored "medium," and bulls that breed four or more times are given a "high" rating.

To test the procedure's validity, Blockey mated each of six low libido bulls with 40 heifers, and the group settled only 31 percent of the heifers in their first heat cycle and only 42 percent within 70 days. On the other hand, a group of seven high libido bulls managed to settle 73 percent of their heifers during the first 21 days and 97 percent in a 70-day period.

Moreover, Blockey's research indicates that serving capacity is highly heritable, a trend corroborated by Gardiner's own results. Of 76 bulls that he tested, seven did not mate at all. Four of these bulls were sired by a bull that had only eight sons in the test, and, of his remaining four sons, three scored in the low category and only one was rated medium.

Although libido testing has been used in Australia since 1980, only a few breeders have tried it here, says Gardiner. One Polled Hereford breeder in Florida has put the concept into practice, and a Kansas Hereford cattleman has also used the libido test.

Gardiner himself ran his first test in November of last year in cooperation with Kansas State University. He plans to be merchandizing his first bulls with a libido score this year. "From a commercial standpoint, it's important to use high libido bulls," says Gardiner. "They're going to settle a lot more cows quicker."

USDA outlines poultry biosecurity measures

WASHINGTON, DC — With recent outbreaks of avian influenza reported in Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, New Jersey and New York, a U.S. Department of Agriculture official has called for stepped-up biosecurity measures by the poultry industry.

"I cannot emphasize too strongly how important it is for producers, truckers and others in the poultry industry to take extra precautions to prevent the spread of this disease," said Bert W. Hawkins, administrator of USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service. Precautions include cleaning and disinfecting all items coming onto a premises containing poultry, and controlling the movement of people who come onto a poultry farm.

"Producers need to realize that they hold the key to preventing this disease from spreading — by practicing strict biosecurity, being alert to disease symptoms and reporting any unusual sickness or death of poultry to their state veterinarian," Hawkins said.

The following biosecurity guidelines can help stop the spread of avian influenza:

1. Don't visit other poultry farms, and don't allow visitors on your farm — even friends and relatives.

2. Don't allow anyone into your poultry house or egg room unless they wear sanitized coveralls and boots. Change your clothing when you leave the poultry house.

3. Do not loan equipment to or borrow equipment from any other farm.

4. Restrict movement of all vehicles entering and leaving your farm. Clean and disinfect the tires, undercarriage and floor of all service vehicles.

5. Bring onto your farm only those articles that can be cleaned and disinfected. Leave on farm articles that cannot be disinfected and cleaned.

6. Always take a shower and wash hair when arriving home from a poultry farm.

7. Scrub and disinfect shoes or boots before leaving your poultry farm.

8. Notify your state veterinarian immediately if there is a sickness or rise in mortality in your poultry flock.

9. Practice all-in and all-out management of slaughter poultry; avoid leaving poultry on the farm exposed to catch crews, crates and vehicles.

Royal Charolais donates embryo flush

KANSAS CITY, Mo — An embryo flush donated by Royal Charolais Co., of Greensburg topped this year's annual auction held by the National Cattlemen's Association at the association's convention in San Antonio.

Profits from the fundraiser are earmarked for public relations programs on behalf of the beef industry.

Auctioned for a final bid of $10,100, the flush was the result of the mating of RCC Royal Temptress 3525 to RCC Royal Constructor I.

Survival depends on management

Agriculture in general, and beef producers in particular, have not shared in the present prosperity of the general economy. Many producers seem to have the attitude that if they can just hang in and survive, things will get better. Indeed, for some, this may happen but I wouldn't count on it. Maybe we should look at each phase of our operation and see what we can do to improve efficiency and thus produce our product at a lower cost.

Improving Weaning Percentage

Let's start with the cow herd. The national calf weaning percentage of under 80 percent is a disgrace. If you can't do better than that I doubt you can show a profit even in better times. A careful examination of your past weaning percentage is a good measure of your management. Some things to do to improve weaning percentage and profit are:

1. Have cows in good thrifty body condition prior to calving. Cows will lose from 120 to 200 pounds at birth from weight of the calf, membranes and fluids. She should have enough body fat to help keep her milking and still return to heat or estrus in 45 to 55 days after calving.

2. Provide the proper environment at calving. The ideal situation is a clean dry pasture hillside. Many calves die needlessly each year from scours and pneumonia that could be prevented by calving in a clean and dry environment. After each calf is born, ear tag and/or tattoo it for identification and dip the navel in an iodine solution to prevent navel ill.

3. Provide enough groceries to the cow so she will milk and rebreed to calve on a twelve month schedule. Too many cows run out of feed about the first of July each summer because pastures are overstocked. In many cases we would wean more pounds of total calf by reducing the stocking rate by 10 to 15 percent.

4. Pay particular attention to first-calf heifers at calving. Usually between 30 and 70 percent will require some assistance at calving. Either be prepared to help them yourself or call for qualified help.

5. Plan to start breeding replacement heifers at least one heat period (21 days) before the mature cows. This will give them extra time to rebreed as two year olds.

6. At weaning time have your veterinarian do a pregnancy exam on each cow exposed to the bull. Ship open cows to market. This will do more than any other single practice to improve your weaning percentage.

7 If you are not already doing so, consider retaining ownership of your calves. You improve your chances of a profit in about seven years out of ten by wintering calves and either selling them as yearlings or feeding them on to slaughter.

8. Evaluate and use available technology such as performance proven bulls or sons of top proven bulls. Get rid of worms and lice. Control flies and use ear implants and feed additives where they will cut your costs and give you a chance to compete with cattlemen who do use all modern technology.

Finishing Problems

Since many of our cattle fed in Pennsylvania are fed in small groups, they often do not gain at optimum rates and have excessive feed costs. The same technology is available to all cattle feeders regardless of how many cattle they feed. It seems that those who only feed a few cattle each year feel they can't afford to do the same things as the large commercial feedlots. In most cases, if you feed your own calves they should be going to slaughter at 15 to 21 months of age This allows you to utilize your pastures for economical growth, but when the cattle have reached about 75 percent of their projected slaughter weight they should go on high energy finishing rations. Some of the common problems I encounter in cattle finishing are:

1. Feeding too much hay or forage crop silage in the belief that it will be cheaper than buying commercial supplements. Feeding more than the minimum roughage needed to keep the rumen functioning and healthy only slows gains and increases costs. Commercial supplements come in many forms but all the good ones contain added minerals, vitamins and feed additives that cut costs. They are a good source of protein when it is needed.

2. Feeding too small an amount of grain. Once cattle reach about seventy-five percent of their potential slaughter weight they should be fed to gain at least 2¼ pounds per day. Non-feed costs start to drive up total cost per pound of gain. Cattle will require at least five pounds of grain per day in addition to corn silage to gain at this level.

3. Failure to use implants and additives. The combination of approved feed additives and ear implants will increase daily gain from 10 to 15 percent and improve feed efficiency from 8 to 13 percent.

4. Failure to market the cattle when they are ready. The cattle industry should have learned a lesson in 1985 on the effect of over feeding to excessive weight. Gains are very costly on market ready cattle and add to the total supply problem. It is seldom profitable to "hold" for a better market.

Most cattlemen can find areas in their management where they can improve and become more efficient. We need to spend more time managing and less time trying to justify past mistakes In this, as in other columns, I only address the commercial phase of the cattle business. There are many reasons for keeping purebred cattle and often they don't relate to commercial cattle production.

Post mortems can aid livestock producers

NEWARK, Del. – Livestock die from many causes–often without leaving obvious clues as to the reasons. Death may occur because of congenital (inherited) factors, chilling, inability of a newborn animal to nurse, or disease. In most cases, these deaths are not a major problem, although diseases can cause devastating losses.

"Fortunately, not all diseases are contagious, and several have been eradicated or their incidence is low," says University of Delaware extension livestock specialist Richard Barczewski. "But when an outbreak does occur, the economic impact can be severe--especially in high management systems. Knowing the cause of death can help you develop an effective herd health program for your livestock operation."

Cause of death can be determined through a post-mortem examination (necropsy). This service is available free or for a minimal fee from state diagnostic laboratories. Delaware's lab is located in Dover at the Department of Agriculture building on Route 13.

A necropsy involves dissecting the various systems of an animal to identify probable cause of death. Barczewski says the systems examined include:

- Respiratory system: nasal cavity, trachea, lungs, diaphragm.
- Digestive system: oral cavity, salivary glands, esophagus, stomach, intestinal tract, liver, pancreas, spleen.
- Urinary system: kidneys, ureters, bladder.
- Reproductive system: male testes, penis, urethra, acessory glands; female ovaries, uterus, vagina.
- Endocrine glands: pituitary, adrenal, thyroid, thymus, parathyroid, pineal.
- Lymphatic system: lymph glands.
- Muscles.
- Circulatory system: heart, veins, arteries.
- Nervous system: brain, spinal cord.
- Skeletal system: bones, teeth.
- Skin and sensory organs.

"A necropsy is complicated and need not be done on every animal that dies," Barczewski says. "However, if you have no idea why the animal died or suspect a causative agent because of symptoms observed prior to death, a necropsy might help you prevent further herd deaths."

How a carcass is handled makes a big difference in the information it gives. If possible, have it examined promptly. Otherwise, refrigerate it to prevent degeneration. Ask your veterinarian to arrange with the state lab to have the necropsy done, then deliver the carcass yourself. Or have the vet perform the procedure on the farm. "If it's done there, observe the necropsy and feel free to ask questions," the specialist advises. "Learn to recognize normal and abnormal signs of disease."

When certain disease organisms are involved, a live, sick animal may have to be sacrificed to obtain cultures to identify the causative agents. The cultures can then be tested for antibiotic sensitivity to determine the best treatment. This can save money by avoiding ineffective shotgun treatments, can ultimately clear up the disease in remaining sick animals.

"Post-mortem exams are often overlooked in livestock operations," Barczewski says. "Use necropsies to stay abreast of health problems in your herd and minimize costly losses due to disease. They can also provide valuable information for treatment and preventive vaccination when preparing a herd health program."

Recordkeeping: key to producer survival

By Richard Barczewski
University of Delaware

NEWARK, Del.–The economic situation in agriculture is bleak. Current futures indicate an expected decline in the price of fat hogs. Equipment costs continue to rise, and the price of land has deflated. The only saving grace for livestock farmers is that corn and soybean prices are down, thus reducing feed costs.

Can your operation survive, considering things aren't going to get better in the near future? That depends on three things: your cost of production, the price at which you sell your hogs, and your debt

Knowing your cost of production is the key to survival. It's a dynamic factor that changes constantly, and the only way to stay ahead of the game is through accurate record keeping.

We in agriculture have had a bad reputation for keeping inadequate business records. As a matter of fact, some of us keep only what's necessary for tax purposes in an old shoe box or something similar and never do anything with it.

If you want to stay in business, that has to change. Cost of production records must be kept and updated to evaluate your profitability. These figures aren't the same from farm to farm, so you'll need to keep records on each farm you manage.

How do you determine your production costs? First, calculate everything that goes into your operation–every penny you spend to rent, buy, grow and sell your hogs. For example, suppose you finish out a feeder pig. The cost of producing that pig includes the following:

Variable Costs:

Initial cost of the feeder pig
- cost of all feed for the pig
- cost of all medications for pig
- cost of housing upkeep for pig
- cost of electricity for pig
- cost of waste handling for pig
- cost of hauling the pig to market
- cost of marketing
- cost of labor in raising pig
- any additional cost associated with the pig (such as interest on money borrowed for feed)

Fixed costs

Land charge
- depreciation on building and equipment
- interest on building and equipment
- interest on money borrowed to buy pig

Remember, your TPC (Total production costs) is constantly changing due to variable feed, repair, vet, electric, hauling, marketing labor and pig costs.

Once you've determined your TPC for a given period, you can calculate your cost of production per pound of pig. To do this, divide the TPC by the pounds of the pig marketed.

If TPC equals $96 and you marketed the pig at 240 pounds, then the cost of producing one pound of pig equals $96 divided by 240 pounds or 40 cents per pound of pig. If the current market price is less than 40 cents a pound, you're in trouble. However, if the current price is 50 cents, your profit is 10 cents per pound of pig produced. This profit can be used to pay principal on your debts, buy yourself a new car or take a vacation.

Problems arise when you rely on your pig operation to pay debts not related to it. If besides raising hogs, you also grow crops, you must calculate the cost of production for each crop and, better still, each field.

By knowing which fields are the least profitable, you may be able to increase your overall profitability in tight economic times by not farming those particular fields, by selling them, deciding not to rent them, or–in cases where the hog operation itself is not profitable–by not raising hogs.

This is an oversimplified example, of course. You can't just stop raising hogs, if you've got payments to make on buildings and land. However, if the situation warrants it, selling out has to remain an option Unfortunately that's not easy to do at this time either

Keeping good records will help you stay on top of your swine enterprise. If production costs increase above profitability, consider your alternatives, such as feeding a cheaper grain instead of corn. Check other marketing strategies, reduce your hired labor and if possible delay major housing repairs.

Knowing where your money is being spent can help you reduce costs in areas that can be cut Don't operate your business like a hobby. Remember--even with depressed prices, some producers are still making money. Managing your operation for profit–not just pigs–is the key to staying in the business. And to do that, you must keep good records.

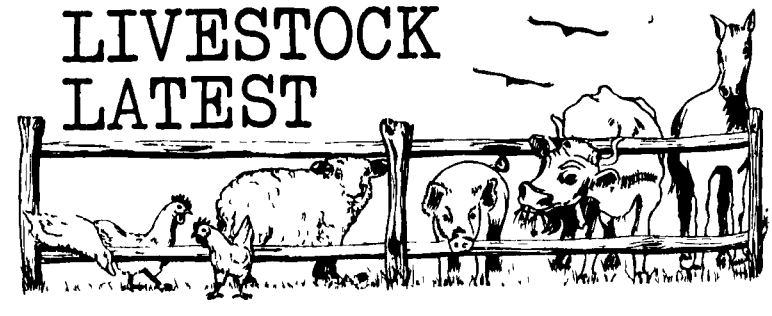
Red Rose Beef Club to meet

LANCASTER – Youth who are interested in feeding beef cattle are invited to attend the reorganizational meeting of the Red Rose 4-H Beef Club at 7:30 p.m. on March 5 at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center.

Election of officers will highlight the meeting activities and members will receive project books.

To be eligible for membership in the club, members must be between the ages of 8 and 18, and must own their own steer – preferably as soon as possible They have the responsibility of caring for and feeding their own steers and keeping records on their steer. They also have the opportunity of showing their steers, and eventually selling them at one of the 4-H auctions.

For more information about the 4-H Club program, contact the Penn State Extension Service



Dauphin sportsmen to discuss pheasants

HARRISBURG – Where have all the pheasants gone? Whether you are a sportsman, or just a nature lover, you probably have asked yourself that question more than once. The situation is not only common to Pennsylvania, but it is a common problem across much of our nation today. Soil Conservation Service biologist, Steve Miller, of Harrisburg, will address this timely topic as the featured speaker at the 1986 Dauphin County Federation of Sportsmens Clubs Annual Banquet.

The banquet will be held on Mar. 7, starting with a social hour at 6 p.m. and will include a ham and filled chicken breast meal at 6:30 p.m. In addition to the featured speaker, the Outstanding County Conservationist will be announced for 1986 and door prizes will be awarded.

The banquet will be held at the Stoney Creek Barn which is located approximately 0.8 mile north of Dauphin along Stoney Creek Road.

The cost of the meal and program will be $9, and reservations are required. Those interested in attending should contact one of the following no later than Mar. 4: Norm Brady, 692-2649; Buss Peters, 545-1625; Larry Mummert, 564-9989.

What happened to the pheasants? SCS biologist Steve Miller will have some answers at the Dauphin Co. Federation of Sportsmen's Clubs banquet on Mar. 7.

NW Keystone Classic scheduled

MEADVILLE – The second regional Northwest Keystone Junior Beef Classic is set for Memorial Day Weekend, Sunday, May 25, at the Crawford County Fairgrounds, Meadville. An educational and entertaining program is also planned for Saturday, May 24 for the afternoon and evening.

There were 196 animals shown by 120 exhibitors from 13 counties in Pennsylvania and six counties in Ohio at last year's highly successful show.

Premiums will be paid for all breeding classes as well as the presentation of trophies for grand champion, reserve champion, and bred-and-owned in each of the breeds as well as commercial.

Premiums will be paid for all steer classes with the grand champion steer receiving a trophy plus $200 and the reserve champion a trophy plus $100. Steers will be judged on conformation, not finish.

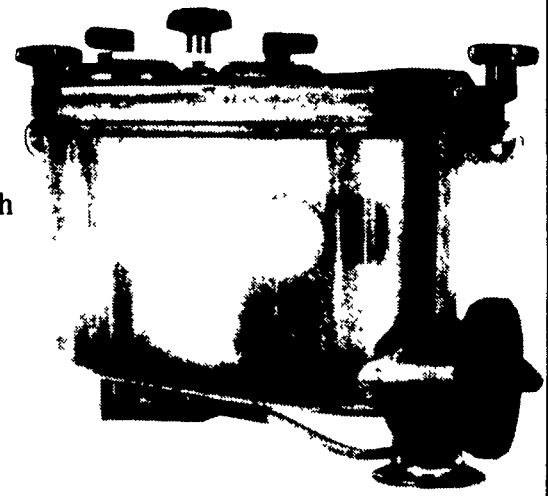
METATRON

Metatron will make your milking system complete!



Here is the answer you've been waiting for!
– The Metatron Electronic Milk Metering System!
Accurately monitors total milk production from each and every cow. The METATRON will work as a stand-alone milk meter or interface to the CODATRON for cow side health, feeding and reproduction control.
Mount the meter directly on the line or out of operator's way with a remote. Up to 32 meters per low or mid line milking systems. Cow identification can be either manual or automatic in parlors.
One step closer to complete milking management and total lactation records.

Northrup King supports ASA membership drive

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. — Northrup King is a sponsor of the American Soybean Association's new-member recruitment program. Each month, from October, 1985, through September, 1986, Northrup King awards 20 bags of soybean seed to a new member in an ASA conducted sweepstakes drawing of new members joining the association during a given month.

"The American Soybean Association is one reason soybeans have been such a successful crop for U.S. growers," says Northrup King Soybean Research Director Dr. John Thorne. "Northrup King feels this is one way of showing its continued support of ASA activities."

Award winners are notified monthly by the American Soybean Association. Following the notification, a Northrup King representative meets with the winners to determine which soybean varieties are best suited for his or her farm.

North Iowa District Sales Manager Terry Hobson says, "The American Soybean Association works hard to develop new soybean markets. Naturally, Northrup King wants to recognize new ASA members who will be the lifeblood of the organization."

Thorne adds, "The American Soybean Association and Northrup King share a common goal of helping farmers increase their profitability."

American Soybean Association President George Fluegel (third from left) welcomes Northrup King as a new member of the American Soybean Association's Agribusiness Program. Export markets improving, bank officer says

LANCASTER — A decline in the value of the dollar has brightened the outlook for foreign trade in agricultural products, a Federal Reserve Bank officer told local agribusinessmen this week.

"The improvement in the value of the dollar has helped improve the outlook for the sale of export products in foreign countries," said Richard W. Lang, senior vice president and director of economic research at the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia.

But success in the long-term is by no means certain, Lang told Lancaster area farmers and agribusinessemen attending an agri-education seminar sponsored by Hamilton Bank at the Farm and Home Center Tuesday.

Success in the future will depend on a number of factors, he said. Specifically, he noted, businessmen will want to keep their eyes on the development of Gramm-Rudman, which, if approved, will act as a restraining force on economic growth, Lang said. But on the plus side, he continued, it should reduce fear of inflation and help further reduce the value of the dollar.

Lang said that although Gramm-Rudman has been attacked as unconstitutional, he believes Congress is determined to put something in place to achieve the same results — a balanced budget. Thus, he predicted, "Fiscal policy is going to be a restraining influence over the next several years."

Businessmen should expect "a shifting emphasis between fiscal and monetary policy," in the future, he said. If the economy should falter this year, which Lang does not expect, we could see further easing of monetary policy.

Richard Lang, senior vice president and director of economic research at the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia, talked to local agribusinessmen at a Hamilton Bank sponsored seminar in Lancaster this week.

Oil prices will also influence the future economic picture and should be carefully monitored. A sharp drop in oil prices will bring the inflation rate down and result in increased economic activity, Lang predicted.

For every $5 drop in oil price, there is generally a half a percentage point increase in real economic growth and a half point drop in the inflation rate.

However, he cautioned, it is important to remember that these changes in the inflation rate are not permanent, and the rate will revert back to its former level when oil prices go back up. "You get a temporary relief from inflation," he explained.

Another factor agribusinessmen will want to watch closely is the value of the dollar. A decline will improve the trade balance, but it will increase prices, he advised.

The rate at which the value declines will affect the outcome of the economy. A gradual decline would allow the economy to make gradual changes, but a sharp decline can create a lot of inflation quickly, cutting off the source of funding for the federal deficit, and result in decreasd foreign investment in the United States, he warned.

Ending his presentation on a positive note, Lang said: "We have some opportunity to go through the remainder of the '80s with some stable economic growth."

Farmer Boy honors top swine producers

Farmer Boy Ag, a Lebanon-based distributor of swine and poultry systems, presented its Farmer of the Year Awards at the Keystone Pork Congress on Feb. 20.

Named Farmer of the Year were Jay and Kevin Rohrer of Hidden Acres Hog Farm, Manheim. The father-son team weaned an average of 21.7 pigs per sow, and earned a $300 gift certificate from Farmer Boy.

In second place was Smiling Porker Farms of Whitesville, New York. Owned by Hatfield Packing Co., the operation is managed by Robert Bortz. Smiling Porker's weaning rate was close behind Hidden Acres at 21.5 pigs per sow.

Other producers recognized by Farmer Boy were Amos Lynn Hoover, Denver, 21.1 pigs per sow; Caleb Stauffer, Newmanstown, 20.64 pigs/sow; and Bill Herman, Lucasville, Ohio, 20.62 pigs/sow.

Each year Farmer Boy honors its top producing customers with the awards.

Select Sires adds to lineup

Based on the January 1986 sire summary, two new sires have entered Select Sires' highly proven Holstein lineup. 7H1323 Mowry-K BRASS Nugget-ET (VG-88) and 7H1239 Pack-Herd TERRIFIC (GP-83) are both graduates of Select's reputable Program for Genetic Advancement (PGA) young sire sampling program.

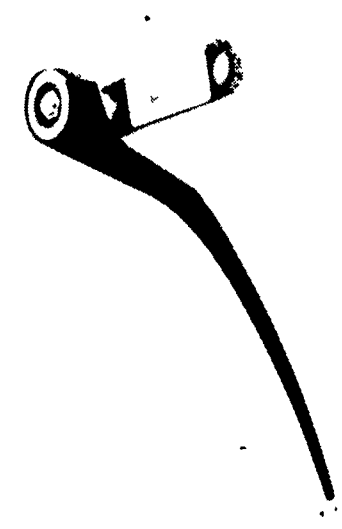
Bred by Kenneth Mowry of Roaring Spring, Pennsylvania, 7H1323 BRASS enters the program as a far improver at +.13%. He is also +824M +54F and 138PD$. His pedigree shows him to be a Cedar-Grove Golden Nugget (VG-86) from a Very Good (86) Elevation dam with a two year old record of 2-4 365d 23,848M 3.9% and 929F. The next dam has an impressive record of 5-11 357d 30,160M 4.8% 1,436F and lifetime numbers of 53,420M 3.8% and 5,847F.

7H1323 BRASS daughters are good bodied animals, being strong with exceptional body depth. They also possess sound rear udder attachments having both high and wide attachments.

7H1239 Pack-Herd TERRIFIC was bred by Richard and Marilyn Packard of Troy, Pennsylvania. His USDA summary puts him at +651M +.01% +26F and +81PD$. He is a son of Shardale Arlinda Chief Jemini and is out of a Very Good (88) Sunnyside Standout Twin dam. Her records top at 4-2 365d 33,875M 3.7% 1,239F with lifetime production of 190,620M 3.5% 6,614F. The second dam is a Gold Medal dam with a fine record of 5-11 342d 24,450M 4.3% 1,041F.

7H1239 TERRIFIC daughters are very sharp dairy animals who exhibit good body depth and width through the pelvic region, as well as having strong udder support.

7H1323 BRASS AND 7H1239 TERRIFIC can both be obtained from Select Sires and its member cooperatives. Select Sires is a family of 11 farmer-owned and controlled A.I. cooperatives, serving the largest number of co-op members in the United States. The basic objective of this federation is to supply livestock breeders with the industry's top genetics.



Hart-Carter's PolyTine

Hart-Carter introduces end tine kit

MENDOTA, Ill. — The Hart-Carter Company, manufacturer of the PolyTine pick-up reel, now offers a replacement and tine kit containing 12 tough, resilient polymer end tines. These are designed to quickly and easily mount on the reel outer crank arm assembly with a single bolt.

The new end tines are made of the same durable material as HCC PolyTines and provide the same benefits. If the reel is accidentally lowered onto the cutter bar, the tines will simply shear off without damage to sickle or combine The new tines also help prevent crop wrapping and carryover. They will trip when hitting an obstruction and in most cases reset.

Kits are available for any Hart-Carter (Hume) wood bat, steel tine pick-up reel. Suggested retail price is $99 for complete kit of 12 end tines, which can also be purchased individually.

For details, see your combine dealer or write or call Hart-Carter Company, 1501 1st Avenue, Mendota, IL 61342, phone 815-539-9371.

NAWG, Velsicol team in wheat market expansion program

RENO, Nev. – At the 1986 annual convention of the National Association of Wheat Growers, an innovative program aimed at strengthening domestic and export markets for U.S. wheat was jointly announced by NAWG Foundation president Jim Billington, and Bob Bever, District Sales Manager for Velsicol Chemical Corporation's Agriculture Business Group.

The NAWG project, which supplies a unique twist to traditional international education/training programs, will be launched with $20,500 from Velsicol Chemical Corporation's 1985 Operation Trade Expansion (V.O.T.E.) program, according to Billington. Over the past two years the V.O.T.E. program has generated nearly $94,000 for investment by NAWG in strategic market development efforts.

This new program will bring in highly qualified international cereal products graduate students and technical processing experts to research and develop new end-products of wheat for U.S. markets.

"Our objective is to use their skills in adapting their international wheat-based foods to American manufacturing and market conditions while still maintaining their true ethnic appeal," says Billington.

"U.S. Wheat Associates will assist in the recruitment of visiting technicians and follow up on spin-offs which can increase consumption overseas. We expect to make some major inroads in solving the basic problem of stagnant domestic U.S. consumption of wheat products by providing U.S. consumers with the best wheat-based products available in the world," he said.

The program will give these international students and trainees valuable exposure to both U.S. academic and industrial food development and marketing principles which are sorely needed in developing countries.

"The potential exists not only for increasing U.S. market demand for wheat but for establishing technologies which will permit mass production and marketing of local ethnic wheat-based products in the countries of origin – significantly bolstering wheat consumption on an international scale," notes Bever.

"We expect successful participants to return to their countries with a unique blend of modern, public and private expertise in wheat product development and processing, which will be applied to similarly increasing wheat consumption in their own countries," states Smail. "We also see these industrial technicians serving as valuable liasions with U.S. Wheat Associates, Inc. and private industry, as we work to promote more effective trade relations."

The program is the first of its kind to utilize the unique skills and expertise of international agriculture scientists for enhancing domestic U.S. markets while training them in modern end-product development techniques. "We hope it will eventually become a model for other joint U.S.-International agricultural research and training projects aimed at strengthening both U.S. farm commodities," said Bever. domestic and foreign markets for

BALTIMORE – The Farm Credit Banks of Baltimore, while feeling the effects of the farming community's economic crunch, continues to be the leading agribusiness lender in the mid-Atlantic region. One of the nation's 12 Farm Credit Districts, the Baltimore District serves farmers and agricultural cooperatives in Delaware, Maryland, Pennsylvania, and West Virginia as well as the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico.

"Our district has enjoyed a secure and stable financial situation through these recent times of doubt," said Gene L. Swackhamer, President of the Farm Credit Banks of Baltimore. "It was our financial security along with several other equally secure districts that helped the troubled areas in our nationwide system during the past year."

Three separate banking institutions constitute the Farm Credit Banks of Baltimore. The Federal Land Bank (FLB) and the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank (FICB) offer long-term and short-term financing along with other financial services to individual farmers and rural home owners through 25 local Federal Land Bank and Production Credit Associations (FLBA & PCA). The Bank for Cooperatives (BC) serves agricultural cooperatives.

Year-end loan volume for the banks and associations totaled $2.9 billion, a decrease from 1984's $3.1 billion However, the quality of the district's loan portfolio remains sound with year-end farm loan delinquency levels of 5.4% of FLB/FLBA loan numbers and 3.9% for the FICB/PCA loans. Comparable delinquency rates for 1984 were 5.2% and 3.6% for the FLB/FLBAs and FICB/PCAs, respectively. In total, the FLB/FLBAs serve more than 26,000 farmers while the FICB/PCAs' accounts number over 24,000.

The FLB/FLBAs experienced $4.6 million in net loan charge offs in 1985. Charge offs for the FICB/PCAs totaled $4.2 million for the same period.

Results of operations for the year ending 1985 reflect an unusual outflow of capital from the district. During 1985 Baltimore contributed a total of $13.6 million to financially stressed Farm Credit Districts, and still the Baltimore Banks and Associations report net earnings of $12.7 million for 1985.

"The Baltimore District's sound financial position can be attributed to the conservative posture of our stockholding borrowers and our equally realistic favor," said Mr Swackhamer. "Out district looks to 1986 with renewed energy in being able to continue to provide constructive credit and financial services to farmers, farm cooperatives, and rural home owners."

More complete and in-depth financial information will be available in the Banks' 1985 annual report to be released in mid-March at the Baltimore Banks' Annual Meeting.

Funks to launch new corn varieties this spring

BLOOMINGTON, IL – Funk Seeds International announces the availability of several new northern and central maturity corn hybrids for planting in Spring 1986.

Funk's G-4409, tested as Experimental 4005A, is adapted to Ohio and eastern Indiana. "G-4409 recorded high yields with excellent standability and features adequate protection against stalk and leaf diseases," says Lorin Jump, Funk product development manager for the Central Business Unit.

New Funk's G-4626 is characterized by good standability and favorable yield responses to top management practices. "Tested as Experimental 5056X, G-4626 is an excellent performing hybrid with good leaf and stalk disease tolerance," Jump says. The hybrid's best areas of adaption are southern Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and northern Missouri.

Funk's G-4327, formerly Experimental 3022P, is characterized by good standability and favorable yield responses to top management practices. G-4327's area of adaption includes Iowa and Illinois.

Funk's G-4428, tested as Experimental 4028X, will be marketed in Nebraska, Iowa and illinois. "G-4428 is a tall hybrid with very strong standability and consistent ear size," says Jump

New Funk's G-4635, formerly Experimental 5055X, is a widely adapted hybrid suitable for planting in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska, Missouri and Colorado.

"Tested as Experimental 5053X, G-4513 recorded excellent yields," says Jump. "It also features good stalk strength and is adapted to a wide area across the Corn Belt "

Funk's G-4425 is characterized by excellent top-end yieldability with good standability. Formerly Experimental 4092X, G-4425 is widely adapted and suitable for planting throughout the nation's Corn Belt

Funk's G-4500, tested as Experimental 5052X, is adapted to Nebraska and western Iowa and Missouri "G-4500 showed excellent yielding ability and overall good performance in Funk tests and in farmer trials last year," says Lorin Jump, Funk product development manager for the Central Business Unit. "The 115-day hybrid complements companion hybrid G-4507."

New Funk's G-4340 is characterized by good standability with excellent yieldability. Tested as Experimental 3020X, G-4340 exhibits good resistance to Goss's Wilt. The hybrid's area of adaption includes Nebraska and Colorado

Funk's G-4307 is adapted to Nebraska and Colorado as well as Wyoming. Tested as Experimental 3025A, G-4307 features excellent stalk strength with fast drydown.

The Funk spokesman says supplies of these hybrids will be limited during the introductory year, with increased inventory projected for 1987.

Seedway develops 'Nestor' ryegrass

YORK – A new tetraploid perennial ryegrass is available to forage producers in the northeastern United States this spring. The variety "Nestor" will be available through Seedway dealers. "Nestor" has been developed for use with legumes, especially alfalfa, for maximum protein production per acre. It can be harvested mechanically for hay, haylage, or silage. It is also well suited to straight seeding and mixtures for intensively managed pastures. Forage producers using rotational grazing schemes will find it's rapid regrowth and persistence valuable.

"Nestor" is a true perennial with superior stand persistence to other tetraploid varieties. This was achieved by selecting two perennial parents in it's development. Older varieties developed by crossing annual and perennial lines do not persist as long as "Nestor".

Sample seed quantities planted in the northeast over the past two growing seasons have shown that "Nestor" germinates quickly, has excellent seedling vigor, and establishes more rapidly than other grass species. However, it is not overly aggressive and has demonstrated excellent compatibility with legumes. Many forage producers have observed that alfalfa-ryegrass stands seldom have weed problems. This may be due to rapid stand establishment by the ryegrass which provides competition for weeds. "Nestor" maturity is matched to alfalfa for optimum forage quality of the entire alfalfa-ryegrass stand.

Pioneer creates program on acreage reduction plan

TIPTON, IN — The country's largest crop seed producer is encouraging its customers to gain a full understanding of the newly announced acreage reduction program, which is strongly supported by the company.To help farmers determine their participation level, Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc. is offering a free computer disk that allows analysis of individual farm situations

"Recognizing that farmers have only until early April to decide whether or not to participate in the 1986 program, our Farm Information Management Systems Division developed a software program that quickly and easily lets a farmer take a look at his options and decide if participation is the best plan for his individual farm," explains John Weidman, regional sales manager for the Eastern Division in Pennsylvania.

The software is designed to operate on an IBM PC or any compatible computer with 256K memory and the Lotus 1-2-3 spreadsheet program.

"Only the variables that change from farm to farm like base acreage, program yield, and expected actual yield will have to be keyed in. Once that is done, the program shows you side by side comparisons of expected net income per acre in both situations," Weidman says.

Large scale farmer participation in the acreage reduction program is best for the long term health of agriculture, he continues.

"The entire farming community is being notified about this software offer, so in addition to our sales people having information about it, others will, too."

Weidman believes that once farmers analyze their situation, they likely will find that participation is their best option.

"Farmers have had to become increasingly aware of borrowed money costs, but one way to beat the high cost of borrowing is with early purchase discounts offered by crop seed companies."

He notes that a six percent cash discount is available to farmers who purchase crop seed from Pioneer during Pioneer Days, February 24-March 1.

"Investing in seed with proven performance does have a substantial impact on ultimate return on investment, plus farmers have an opportunity to lock in the right hybrids and varieties for their operation by buying seed early," Weidman says.

Sales representatives having IBM computers are encouraged to run farm program option comparisons for everyone requesting them. All sales representatives have information on the program's capabilities and will order a free software program disk for anyone who requests it.

Berks dairyman to receive conservation award

LEESPORT — The Berks County Conservation District along with the Berks County Agricultural Stabilization Conservation Service will again be sponsoring a banquet to honor conservation efforts in the county. This year it will be held at Trainers Midway Diner off exit 5 of Route 78 just east of Bethel, on Friday, Mar. 21 at 7 p.m.

To be honored as Outstanding Conservation Farmer of the Year will be Forrest C. Stricker of Heidelberg Township. He has a family dairy farm and for many years has been using conservation practices on his farm. They include contour strip cropping, conservation tillage, and grass waterways. He is an active member and officer in the Conrad Weiser Young Farmers. He is a director of the Berks County Holstein Club and a member of the Berks Farm City Committee.

Other farmers who will be recognized and awarded a sign are: Walter M. Brubaker of Greenwich Township, Norman Moser and son Laverne of Colebrookdale Township, Sam Schlouch and son David of Brecknock Township, and Fred Wenz of Brecknock Township.

The Outstanding Conservation Educator this year is Larry R. Kirk who is a teacher in the Berks County Intermediate Unit. He has been involved in outdoor education programs since they began and introduced the program in the Kutztown Area School District when he taught there. He is still active with several county districts each year as they carry out their environmental education programs.

Harvey Adams will be honored as Outstanding Conservationist of the Year. He is now retired but remains an active member of the Izaak Walton League of America and has 53 years of continuous service as an office holder.

Adams was a charter member of the Berks County Chapter which was organized in 1932. He served as treasurer for 52 years and was a National Director for 22 years.

The speaker for the evening will be Dr. James Grace, Extension Coordinator, School of Forest Resources at Penn State University. He is serving as chairman of the Year of the Forest Committee for Pennsylvania in 1986.

Ticket reservation deadline is Mar. 14. The family style dinner will cost $7.50. No tickets are sold at the door the night of the banquet so call the Ag Center and arrange for your ticket now. Phone: 372-4655.

Northumberland no-till conference scheduled

SUNBURY — The Northumberland County Conservation District and the Cooperative Extension Service announced that the third annual no-till conference will be held Mar. 4 at the Farmers' Best Restaurant, East Lewisburg.

The session runs from 10:00 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. and will cover a variety of topics pertaining to no-till and farm management.

Guest speakers will include Douglas Beegle, extension agronomist from Penn State; Dennis Calvin, extension entomologist from Penn State; Ken Olenderski, Pennsylvania Forestry Association; Mike Brubaker, Brubaker Agronomic Consulting; Joseph McGahen, extension agronomist from Penn State; George Phillips, Northumberland County Conservation District; Vernon Brose, Northumberland County extension agent; Norman Conrad, Union County extension agent; and Willard Jones, Doebler Seed Corn.

Topics include starter fertilizer, insects associated with no-till, woodlot management, weed control in no-till, early vs. late corn varieties, no-till demonstration plots, crop economics, and chemical safety. Awards will also be presented to the winners of the conservation district's no-till corn yield contest.

A $3 registration fee for the workshop includes lunch. Tickets may be purchased by calling the conservation district office, 988-4224.

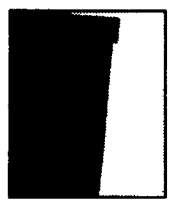
Tomorrow's Building At Today's Price!

All new Morton Buildings now include the most popular design features.

PROTECTION LINER
The OSB Liner Panel installed between the steel panels and the framing serves two functions. 1) inside the building, it prevents bumps from equipment, tools, etc. from denting the steel siding, and 2) outside, it greatly reduces denting and panel defacing from bumps occurring from every day use.



ROOF OVERHANGS AND VENTA RIDGE
The vented overhang-vented ridge system provides additional building air flow, allows for a future ceiling with proper attic ventilation, and improves building aesthetics.

PLASTISOL PAINT ROOF PANELS
Plastisol is an exceptionally thick (.4 mil) premium quality coating with a proven record of providing superior durability and long lasting protection against red rust (backed by a 15 year written warranty against red rust).

To take advantage of this price, we ask your cooperation with the following: Provide a level building site; furnish unloading help; participate in our 3 payment plan and accept delivery and erection at Morton Buildings' convenience. Also note, travel expenses will be added if your building site is more than 40 miles from the sales office. Ask about our optional Energy Performer Liner & Insulation Package. For a complete explanation of this offer and a tour of Morton Buildings in your area, contact the nearest sales office.

A 42'x10'x75' building includes: 18' wide double end door with weatherseal kit, two walk doors, three windows with shutters, two foot overhangs sides and ends, roof vent-a-ridge, filler strip at peak base & eave, Plastisol roof panels, OSB protection liner, weathervane, gutters and downspouts, meets all snow load requirements.

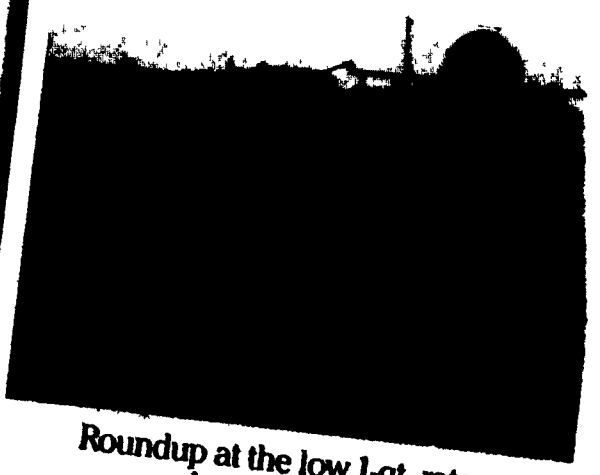
SPRING TILLAGE SPREADS QUACKGRASS. ROUNDUP® STOPS IT COLD. AND THAT'S A FACT.



Roundup at the low 1-qt. rate, gives you up to 90% quackgrass control.

It's a fact: the quackgrass you till or work up will come back to hurt you. And become a bigger problem than ever. That's because tillage only breaks up the roots or rhizomes, and spreads them throughout your field, causing more plants to emerge.

Just 75 quackgrass shoots per 5-feet of row can mean a 14% yield loss in corn. The result: a quackgrass problem that can cost you 50% or more of your yield. And you can't afford that.

AFFORDABLE QUACKGRASS CONTROL WITH ROUNDUP® IS EASY.

Only Roundup herbicide controls quackgrass, roots and all. Just follow these simple guidelines to make Roundup at the low 1-quart rate work for you.

First, use 5 to 10 gallons of water per acre. Next, add non-ionic surfactant. (Use 2 quarts per 100 gallons of spray solution for surfactants containing more than 50% active ingredient. Or 4 quarts per 100 gallons for those with less than 50% active ingredient.) Finally, apply with flat fan nozzles. (You want the spray pattern to overlap.)

Roundup. Or tillage. The choice is yours. But if you don't want quackgrass to wind up costing you real money, there really is no choice: it's Roundup.

ALWAYS READ AND FOLLOW THE LABEL FOR ROUNDUP HERBICIDE.

How Carl Kreider reached his 10-ton alfalfa yields

QUARRYVILLE – Reliable seed, a well-drained field, timely rains and a skilled crop manager named Carl Kreider were just the right ingredients to produce the best stand of alfalfa in Pennsylvania last year.

Kreider, a young dairyman from Quarryville, Lancaster County, harvested 10.48 tons of alfalfa from each acre of a five-acre field he enrolled in the state's highly regarded Alfalfa Growers Program, sponsored by the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council.

He and 15 other top growers in the program were recently recognized for their achievements at an awards luncheon in State College.

While there were many factors that allowed the winners in four regions to achieve their outstanding yields, it was evident from the results that many considered W-L seed varieties to be among the most important ingredients.

Six of the 16 winners, including the grand champion, used W-L seed, distributed exclusively in the area by Beachley-Hardy Seed Co. of Shiremanstown.

"It's definitely a high quality seed," said Kreider, who planted W-L 313. "The varieties are dependable, and the crop is more persistent and I think the hay quality is better."

Kreider, who grows 80 acres of alfalfa, direct seeded his grand champion field in March 1984 at a rate of 16 pounds to the acre. After establishment, he applied two tons of lime per acre, plus 25 pounds of nitrogen and 150 pounds of phosphate.

Proper management is important, he said, but his field has proven to be perfect for alfalfa. It is composed of Chester soil and lies atop a broad ridge.

"It gives you the drainage you need, but still holds more moisture than a field on a hill would. I think it's an ideal field for hay," said Kreider.

Last year, he took four cuttings, the first of which came off in mid May and was made into haylage. The other three came off as hay. He made his cuttings at intervals of 43, 40 and 37 days.

Kreider said he was impressed with all four cuttings. "The fourth cutting looked just like the first," he said. "It was so fresh."

A first-time participant in the Alfalfa Growers Program, Kreider said he knew he was getting better-than-average yields, but he never realized how much better

When his results came back showing a 10.48-ton yield with 4,320 pounds of crude protein and 12,264 pounds of total digestible nutrients (TDN), even he was surprised.

"I guess I really failed to realize how much we might lose to field losses," he said. "I thought my best fields were getting 8 tons. I was really surprised when those results showed over 10 tons."

Just how impressive his yield was can be seen when comparing it to those of the other 93 participants in the nine-year-old growers program. The average yield for the year was 6.57 tons per acre for the year, while all growers across the state typically average just over three tons.

Growers program officials explained that yield is not the only consideration when picking a grand champion. They also take into account crude protein and TDN, both of which Kreider's crop excelled in.

While Kreider was busy last summer winning top honors in the southeastern part of the state, Region 1, John Tautin of Crawford County was producing a fine pure alfalfa stand of his own in Region 4, which stretches across the state's northern tier.

With a 7.81-ton-per-acre yield in some of the state's most difficult growing soil, Tautin captured the Region 4 championship. His crop, harvested from a 12-acre field, came in with 3,608 pounds of crude protein and 9,770 pounds TDN.

Tautin, from 11 miles north of Meadville, admitted that he doesn't fare in an area known for its high alfalfa yields. "In our area, it's really tough to grow alfalfa," he said.

In addition to milking a herd of 40 cows, Tautin grows about 42 acres of alfalfa in his Chenango gravelly loam soil. "It's not the best, but I've got a couple of fields that really produce."

While his yields have been remarkably high, the age of his championship stand is even more remarkable. Tautin direct seeded his field with W-L 316 at a rate of 18 pounds to the acre back in the spring of 1982, and the stand has produced higher yields in each of its four years.

"It has improved with age," said the dairyman. "It just keeps getting better every year."

Tautin said he has been planting W-L for nine years and hasn't found a better variety. "It's excellent," he said. "In fact, I recommend it to my neighbors and now they're getting excellent crops."

Tautin made four cuttings on his 1985 crop at intervals of 38, 39 and 45 days, with the first coming in late May and the last in early September. All four were used for low-moisture haylage.

Other top producers in the Alfalfa Growers Program who used W-L seed varieties were:

* Robert P. Glenn, Lawrence County. Glenn earned second place in the mixed alfalfa-grass category in Region 4 with a 6.97-ton-per-acre yield, using a mix of W-L 316 and rye grass.

His crude protein count was 2,783 pounds per acre and his TDN tested at 8,136 pounds.

* Frank and Tom Telesz, Warren County. The Telesz brothers produced a pure alfalfa stand that yielded 7.29 tons to win second place in Region 4.

The W-L 315 crop produced 3,366 pounds of crude protein and 8,900 pounds TDN.

* Ronald M. Meyer, Clinton County, Meyer's 7.12-ton crop was good for second place in pure stand competition in Region 2.

Planted with W-L 316, it produced 3,194 pounds of crude protein and 8,408 pounds TDN.

* Stephen Mellott, Franklin County. Mellott placed second in Region 1 with his alfalfa-grass mix that yielded 8.08 tons.

Using M-L 316, he produced a crop with 3,614 pounds of crude protein and 9,765 pounds TDN.

Crawford Co. names top corn, alfalfa producers

MEADVILLE – The Eighteenth Annual Crawford County Corn & Forage Day was held on Feb. 12 at the Meadville Quality Inn. This educational program is sponsored by the Crawford County office of the Penn State Cooperative Extension Service in cooperation with 28 seed, feed, fertilizer, chemical and farm equipment dealers.

One of the highlights of this year's program was the recognition of six local farmers for their achievement in corn and alfalfa production. Robert Campbell, R.D. 2, Saegertown; George and Timothy Greig, R.D. 2, Linesville; Timothy Proper, R.D. 1, Townville; and Thomas Rogers, R.D. 1, Springboro, were recognized for their corn production in The Pennsylvania Five Acre Corn Club. Robert Baughman, R.D. 1, Townville; George and Timothy Greig, and John Tautin, Sr., R.D. 3, Conneautville, received awards in The Pennsylvania Alfalfa Growers' program.

Campbell grew 143 bushels of ear corn per acre of Funks 4211 Variety, with a three-year average of 142 bushels of corn. Rogers' yield was 123.9 bushels of shelled corn per acre growing the variety of Voris 284. Proper's yield check was 98.7 bushels of ear corn per acre of Funks 664 Variety. Greig's corn yield of Schlessmans SX405 variety was 129.9 bushel per acre. In addition Greig had 5.65 tons per acre from three cuttings of an alfalfa-clover-timothy mixed hay. Baughman's pure alfalfa stand with three cuttings yielded 4.86 tons per acre. Tautin also had a pure stand of alfalfa which yielded 7.81 tons per acre in four cuttings. This was the third year in a row for measuring yields on this field and each year the tonnage increased. Tautin was also honored on January 24, 1986, in State College for having the highest alfalfa yield in the Western Region of Pennsylvania.

The second highlight was having Myron Wehr speak on "Grain Marketing, How I Do It". Wehr is a grain and hay farmer from New Waterford, Ohio. He raises about 1,000 acres of corn, 200 acres each of oats, wheat and alfalfa hay and uses hay drying aids for curing his hay. He was raised on a small dairy farm, is an agriculture graduate of Ohio State University is married and has two daughters Wehr markets grain and hay and sells hogs and beef cattle.

The secret of his success is keeping detailed records on his operation, knowing his cost of productions, when to market grain or put it through an animal to market. His pre-budgeting is a big part of his marketing program.

Other speakers on the program included Lynn Hoffman, Penn State agronomist and manager of the Agronomy Research Farm at Rock Springs, speaking on "The Value of Crop Rotation".

Douglas Beegle, Penn State Extension Agronomist, discussed the new Penn State soil testing report and how to interpret the results. Beegle stressed laboratory values are important but the interpretation of the results as applied to Pennsylvania soils is the key to growing our agronomic crops. He also discussed the nitrogen application to our corn crop stressing the best time to apply nitrogen is about three weeks to a month after the corn is planted using side dressing equipment.

Dennis Calvin gave a presentation on corn & forage insects and their control. Calvin spoke on both chemical and biological insect control and various ways to control insects by cultural methods

Caroline Lundell, manager of the Crawford County Agriculture Stabilization & Conservation Service of the USDA, spoke briefly on the new corn program being offered under the 1985 Farm Bill in 1986.

Brubaker Ag Service honors top growers

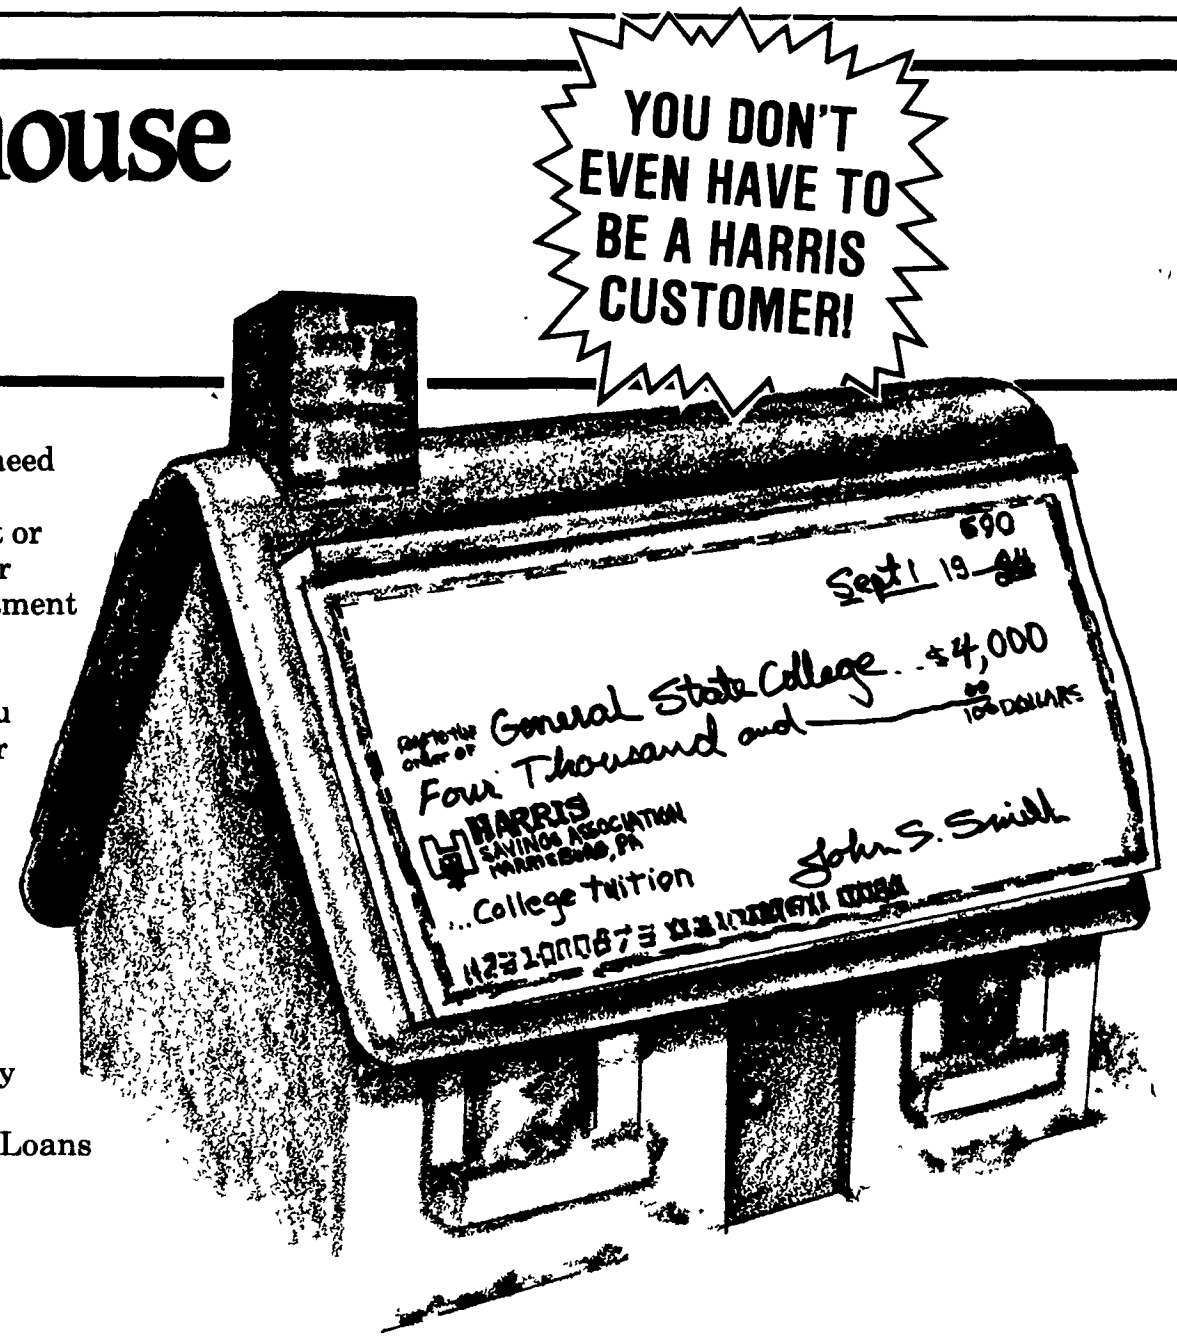
How to turn your house into a checkbook.



There comes a time in the life of every homeowner when the need arises for large amounts of money.

Use of futures to boost farm income?

WASHINGTON – Congress has opened the door to an exploration of the possibility that farmer use of commodity futures and options markets might eventually play a role in national efforts to protect farm income, Chairman Kika de la Garza, D-Tex., of the House Agriculture Committee said.

"For many years, economists have been talking in an academic way about finding some way to take advantage of the price-protecting features of commodity hedging to help move toward our national policy goal of maintaining a healthy and prosperous agriculture. Now we have a chance to find out whether this approach holds real promise," de la Garza said.

The new opportunity is contained in a section of the 1985 farm bill, the Food Security Act of 1985. The farm law directs the Secretary of Agriculture to make a study to find out how producers of grains, soybeans and cotton might use commodity futures and options markets to protect their incomes and to find out how this might affect federal farm program costs.

The study will be more than an academic exercise, de la Garza noted, because the law requires the Secretary to conduct a pilot program in which grain, soybean and cotton farmers will be offered a chance to participate in a test of the use of commodity markets to "lock in" price protection for crops. Farmer participants in the pilot program, which must be made available for voluntary use by producers in at least 40 counties, will be guaranteed that net returns for their commodities will not be allowed to fall below the price support levels for their crops

"I do not know yet how the pilot program will be structured, but the law makes it clear that no farmer can be forced to take part in the experiment, and no producer will lose any of his existing farm program rights if he chooses not to participate in the test," de la Garza said.

"Nobody knows at this point whether the experiment will teach us anything useful about possible methods of strengthening farm income protection in the years ahead. But if there is any chance at all that we can come up with something helpful for farmers, this is worth testing," de la Garza added.

The law requires the Secretary of Agriculture to report the results of his study to the House and Senate Agriculture Committees by Dec. 31, 1988. No specific dates for operating the pilot program are spelled out in the law, but the Act specifies that the program is to be conducted "in connection with the study."

Some of the questions Congress wants answered are laid out in specific directives in the new law Among them are:

– The extent of price stability and income protection producers might reasonably expect from participating in commodity markets.

– The impact on the federal budget if farmers participate in commodity markets compared with the cost of established price support programs.

– Whether it would be feasible to somehow mate federal price support programs with private sector risk-avoidance services

In setting up the required pilot program, the Agriculture Department must consult on the design of the effort with an advisory group including farmers, processors, exporters and commodity traders. Once the program is designed, the Secretary of Agriculture would be required to join industry groups and the Commodity Futures Trading Commission in operating an intensive educational program for producers in the selected pilot counties

Cornell soil expert heads biotechnology study group

ITHACA, NY — A Cornell University scientist is playing a key role in shaping national policy on ways to protect the public and the environment from potential dangers of genetically engineered microorganisms created by the biotechnology industry.

Martin Alexander, a soil microbiologist and microbial ecologist, headed the 10-member U.S. Environmental Protection Agency study group that recommends stepped-up research to develop safeguards against such organisms that could find their way into the environment on a large scale. The group s report was issued Jan. 30.

"I know of no major technology that has not had some deleterious effect," declares Alexander, who teaches in the New York State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at Cornell.

Risks are small when a few genetically manipulated species find their way into the environment, but the likelihood of harm increases greatly when a large number of different kinds of these organisms are released, Alexander argues. The rapidly growing biotechnology industry is expected to come up with many different strains of organisms for agriculture and pollution control, for example.

For Alexander, though, the question is whether such exotic creatures not only will be beneficial, as promised, but also do some harm.

In its report — "Assessing EPA's Biotechnology Research and Information Needs" — the national panel strongly recommends that EPA develop scientific tests for evaluating the survival, multiplication, dispersal, and possible harmful effects of genetically engineered organisms.

EPA says it will spend $5.5 million in 1986 to determine the risks from products created through gene-splicing techniques. The agency's science advisory board, in the report prepared by the panel on biotechnology, says a "broader" effort is needed.

Such research is essential for the agency to gain the scientific knowledge to determine, or even predict, the potential risks of those organisms before such microorganisms find their way into the environment on a large scale, Alexander emphasizes.

"There is always a possibility of a problem," Alexander says. "Until you have had extensive experience with a particular technology, you don't know the probability of danger It's like writing an insurance policy before an accident occurs."

In the case of microorganisms created through recombinant DNA techniques, a system to assess the potential risks involved before new strains of such organisms cause any problem is a must, he stresses.

In urging EPA to develop a reliable risk assessment system, the study group recommends that the agency focus its efforts on several key scientific questions.

These include the ability of a genetically altered organism to survive, to grow, to multiply, to transfer its genetic material to other naturally occurring organisms, and to spread from the site of the initial release.

In addition, the research effort should be directed toward developing means of determining the effects of such an organism on the environment as well as the organism's capacity to cause disease.

The panel also recommends that EPA coordinate its efforts with other federal regulatory agencies, such as the Food and Drug Administration, the National Institutes of Health, and the U.S. Department of Agriculture, in establishing a comprehensive risk assessment system to prevent communicable diseases caused by genetically altered organisms.

Another Cornellian, Ralph Hardy, a visiting professor of life sciences and president of BioTechnica International, a biotechnology firm in Massachusetts, was a member of the study group. Other members were: Ralph Baker, Colorado State University; Rita Colwell, University of Maryland; Stanley Falkow, Stanford University Medical School; Don Kaplan, Dow Chemical Corp.; Francis Macrina, Virginia Commonwealth University; James Moulder, University of Chicago; Gil Omenn, University of Washington; and Robert P. Williams, Baylor College of Medicine.

MD tobacco trade team visits Europe

ANNAPOLIS — A six member Maryland trade team is in Europe this week visiting tobacco manufacturers in an effort to stimulate sales of Maryland Type-32 leaf in advance of the 1986 market season.

Led by Ernest C. Shea, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture at the Maryland Department of Agriculture (MDA), the group will visit 24 companies in Switzerland, Luxembourg, Belgium, Germany and the Netherlands in an effort to strengthen and rekindle interest in tobacco from Southern Maryland.

Accompanying Mr. Shea on the mission are: Bradley H. Powers, Chief of the Marketing Services Section, MDA; Dr. Claude G. McKee of the University of Maryland and a member of the Maryland State Tobacco Authority; Edward Gieske, President of the Maryland Tobacco Improvement Foundation; Roland E. Darcey of Upper Marlboro, a tobacco grower and a member of the Governor's Export Trade Council; and Gary Hodge, Executive Secretary of the Tri-County Council of Southern Maryland.

According to Mr. Shea, "The mission was conceived by Maryland Secretary of Agriculture, Wayne A. Cawley, Jr. over the past several years as a result of his listening to Southern Maryland farmers' concerns over the future of their number one crop. Sales to Western Europe dropped from almost six million pounds in 1981 to two and one-half million pounds in 1984.

"We want to talk directly with our traditional European customers on their turf to learn what we can do to retain and, hopefully, expand our sales to them. Over the years, there have been concerns over price, quality and numerous other factors in the international tobacco trade and we want to listen to their side of the story.

The effort being made this week on behalf of Maryland tobacco is part of Governor Hughes' "International Trade Initiatives" announced last year.

The overall export promotion program which, for agriculture, emphasizes value-added products (such as processed foods) as well as raw agricultural products (such as grain and tobacco), has been a continuing effort in Maryland since the inception of the Department of Agriculture in 1973. Members of the Department's Marketing Services staff participate in food and agricultural trade shows throughout the world to familiarize foreign customers with local products. In addition to a new export exhibit to be used at shows, the Marketing Office is currently updating its Export Directory, researching new markets for Maryland products, developing bi-lingual brochures about specific commodities and advertising Maryland commodities overseas.

The most immediate project now underway, the tobacco trade mission, will culminate with business meetings in Amsterdam and, finally, return of the team to Maryland on February 27.

Farm Talk

By Jerry Webb

Hunting good for farmers?

Farmers are the world's most generous and accommodating hosts when it comes to hunters. A trip through our countryside during good hunting days reveals the magnitude of this generosity.

Hardly a country road is spared the hazard of an out-of-state or city hunter's car parked dangerously on the shoulder. And a pause in the country to enjoy the quiet beauty is often punctuated with the sound of gunfire.

Game is killed, dogs are exercised, hunters commune with nature, and farmers pray their livestock will be spared and perhaps a few rabbits or quail will be left for their own hunting.

This brings up an interesting question. Why do farmers so willingly, or at least unprotestingly, turn over their fields, ponds, woods and marshes to arms-bearing strangers who are there to kill? Maybe farmers feel a little guilty about having all that land and so little time to hunt. Or maybe they feel sorry for their city cousins who spend most of their lives indoors and who may never own a piece of ground larger than a cemetery plot.

Perhaps farmers tire of fussing with hunters over property rights and submit to their ravage rather than resist. But it is the farmers' land and those who hunt it without permission are trespassing.

Some farmers who have heard of the income differential that exists between farm and city workers have turned their "game refuges" into significant income equalizers. They charge hunters for the right to hunt. And if the hunting is good on their land, they make money. City hunters who have mor on their land, they make money. City hunters who have more money than time want to go where the game is and they're usually willing to pay for the opportunity.

Even though a lot of farmers are posting their land these days, not many are charging hunters. Some post to provide legal protection in case a hunter gets on the property and shoots a cow or gets in the way of a mean bull. A lot of posted ground can still be hunted with permission– something that should be received even if land isn't marked. After all, what hunter would welcome a carload of farmers onto his suburban lot to poke through his shrubs and flowers in search of live animals.

But the hunter who drives up the farm house, leaves his gun in the car until permission to hunt is granted, usually gets a warm reception.

One way to assure continued good feelings between farmer and hunter is through a few simple ground rules– no shooting close to building, fires, etc These should be explained when the hunter comes to the door. He should also be told to check out when he leaves, if this is desirable. Most farmers want to know who is wandering around their property with guns and they want to know when they've gone.

Here's a final thought on hunting rights. Farmers could gain a very strong and vocal ally by working with hunters on some of their mutual problems Farmers own most of the land where hunters hunt. This provides a good reason for hunters to understand farm problems and want to do something about them. In case anyone doubts the collective power of hunters, consider what the National Rifle Association has done to proposed gun laws over the years. NRA is a powerful organization that includes a lot of the people who hunt here. The basis for friendship and cooperation is there. It's up to farmers and their organizations to call on the hunters for help.

Buyout packet available

ITHACA, NY – Questions about the rules, regulations, and implications of the national dairy herd buyout program are answered in a packet of reports developed by agricultural economists at Cornell University and five other land-grand institutions

The packet contains 10 reports on the herd buyout program of the 1985 farm bill, which was signed into law in December 1985. It is being distributed to county offices of Cornell Cooperative Extension in New York State and to extension staff at land-grant universities in every state except Alaska and Hawaii.

"We're providing information to extension office personnel, who will work directly with farmers to help them think this through," says Andrew M. Novakovic, an agricultural economist in the New York State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at Cornell.

The packet was prepared by members of the National Dairy Herd Buyout Extension Program Committee, which was formed in November 1985 by a group of agricultural economists from six land-grant universities — Cornell, Michigan State University, North Carolina State University, Ohio State University, Texas A&M University, and the University of Wisconsin.

Reports contained in the packet cover most aspects of the buyout program, and will be valuable to farmers interested in participating in it, Novakovic says.

The reports explain the rules on the buyout, tax implications, factors to consider before enrolling in the program, and bidding strategies, among other topics Also available is a videotape designed to assist farmers in making decisions on whether to participate in the program.

New York dairy farmers interested in obtaining the packet are urged to contact county offices of Cornell Cooperative Extension The packet is free

Leiby named director of Lehigh County extension

UNIVERSITY PARK – Robert E. Leiby, Lehigh County Extension agent, was named County Extension Director earlier this month.

As extension director, Leiby is responsible for coordinating the entire extension program in Lehigh County, including programs on agriculture, family living, 4-H and community development.

A member of The Pennsylvania State University's Cooperative Extension staff since 1975, Leiby has been coordinating Lehigh County's agricultural programs for nearly a year. Because of the diverse population in the county, he has emphasized strong farm/city relationships, as well as special programs and agronomy and horticulture.

Leiby also brings strength to the county extension programs with his expertise in computers. In addition to spending a year as a computer support agent at Penn State's University Park campus, Leiby was an integral part of the College of Agriculture's computer display at the 1986 Farm Show. He worked with the College's computer support service to demonstrate the Pennsylvania Extension computer network to thousands of Farm Show visitors. The computer system is now available to public at no charge.

Leiby began his Extension career working with 4-H programs in Lehigh County. Some of the 4-H programs he initiated include the black locust project, the holiday 4-H bowling tournament, 4-H skiing and the 4-H embryology project.

He received a bachelor of science in agronomy from the Delaware Valley College of Science and Agriculture, and a master's degree in agricultural education from Penn State. He is a member of both the Pennsylvania and National Associations of County Agricultural Agents, and the Pennsylvania and National 4-H Agents Associations.

In his new position as county extension director, Leiby replaces Betty Heinbach, who recently retired as director after 30 years with the Cooperative Extension Service

Bill would change deficiency rule

WASHINGTON – To correct a provision in the 1985 Farm Bill which would reduce payments for corn, wheat, rice and some cotton producers, Iowa Senator Chuck Grassley is co-sponsoring a bill which would particularly protect Iowa's high-yield corn growers

Under old laws, deficiency payments for farmers were based on average yields over a "rolling" five-year span, with the oldest year dropped from the calculation each new season. The new formula uses a "fixed" five year span, dropping the years of highest and lowest yields.

The new formula would thus eliminate many Iowans' best crop years from the formula, with new averages based on low-yield years.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture estimates that the new formula would cost farmers $1 billion if not corrected. Iowa's share of that loss, said Grassley, would probably amount to "tens of millions of dollars."

Although Grassley won several improvements in the 1985 Farm Bill, he ultimately voted against the legislation "because of numerous provisions which were not in the best interest of farmers."

The reform legislation introduced this week and co-sponsored by Grassley would require USDA when evaluating farmers to use the 1985 program yield formula or the 1985 Farm Bill formula, whichever is higher, protecting tens of millions of dollars in income for Iowa corn growers

Grassley said stakes of the reform legislation "go far beyond Iowa, because wheat, cotton, rice and other feed grain producers are in the same boat as Iowa corn growers They're all jeopardized by this new formula, and should all carefully evaluate implications for their sectors."

Case organization formed in Ohio

SIDNEY, OH – A new organization open to all persons who are interested "in the restoration, preservation and historical background" of machines and related items bearing the name of Jerome Increase Case and his companies recently was incorporated in Ohio and is seeking members worldwide.

Officially named the "J. I. Case Collectors Association, Inc.," the not-for-profit group was formed following an organizational meeting held at the Darke County Steam Threshers Association show in Greenville, Ohio, last year.

The group honors the memory and the heritage of J. I. Case, who was one of America's foremost inventors and producers of farm engines and machinery during the last half of the 19th Century.

According to the association's by-laws, principal purposes of the new organization are to foster the "exchange of information and materials" and to provide "opportunities for recreation and education for individuals...with an interest in equipment and other matters associated with J.I Case companies."

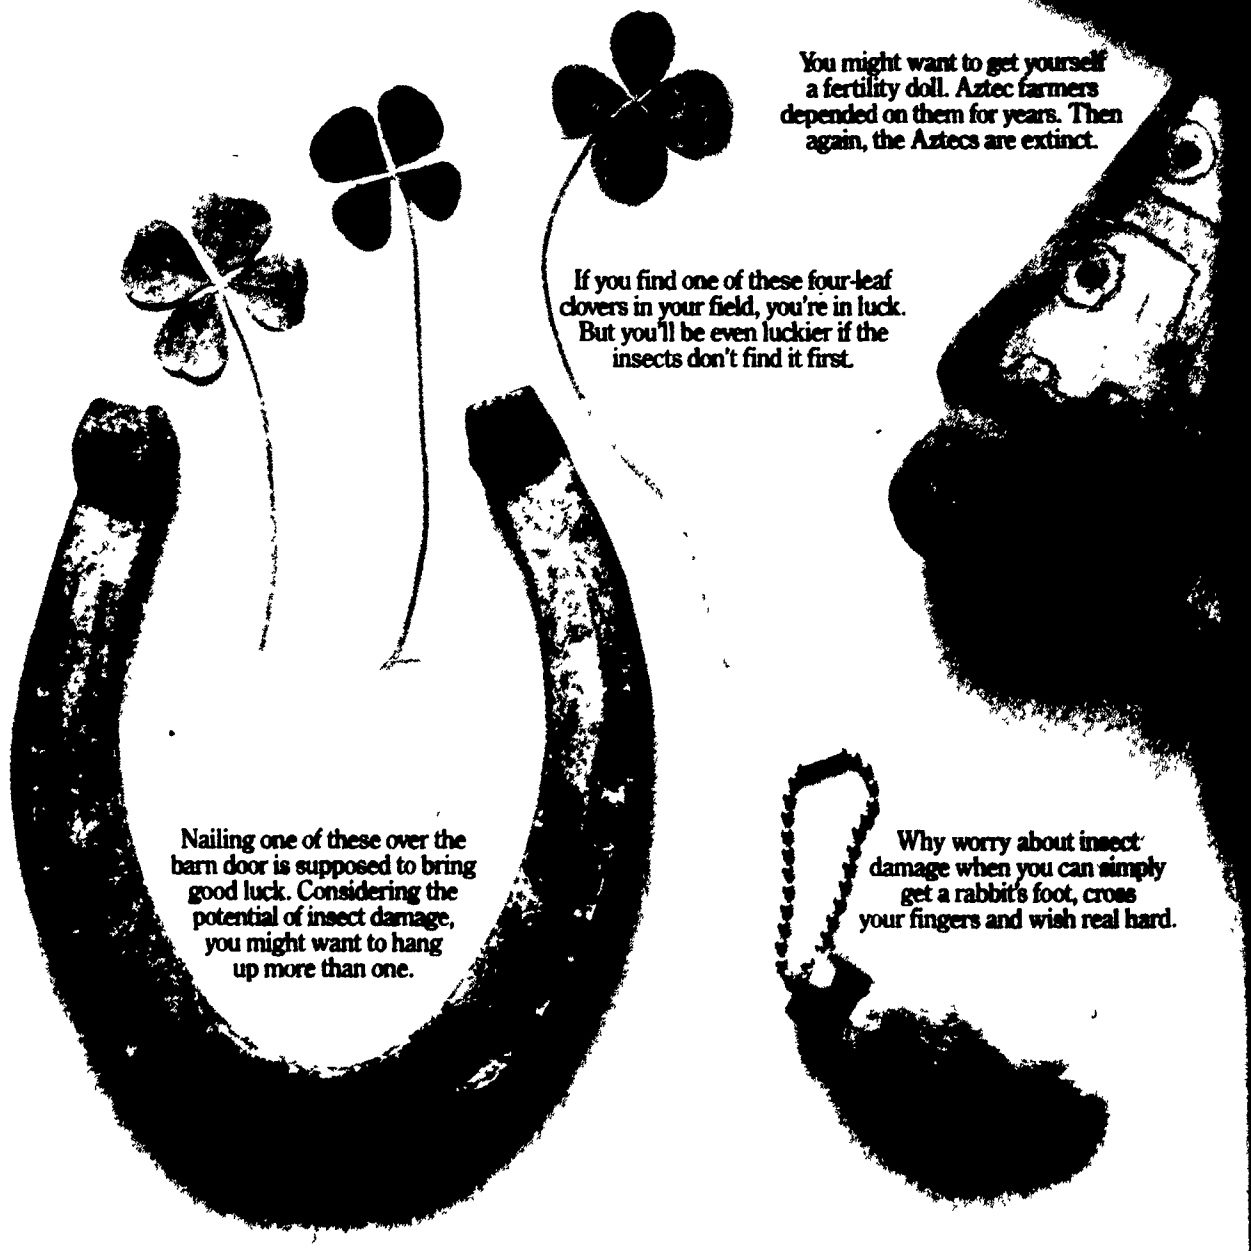
Case steam traction engines, gasoline tractors and machinery were featured at Darke County's 1985 event; and several of that show's organizers are charter officers of the new J. I. Case group. They are· D. A. Nealeigh, president; Bruce E. Davis, treasurer; and John W Davis, secretary. The board of directors includes Clarence E. Christian, Jr., David T. Erb (who serves as editor of "Old Abe's News," the association's newsletter), and Helen Case Brigham (a great-granddaughter of J. I. Case)

Membership dues currently are $15 a year, including a subscription to the quarterly newsletter Additional memberships in a family group may be obtained without the newsletter subscription for $10 a year

Persons interested in obtaining membership applications or learning more about the organization should write to Bruce E. Davis, Treasurer, Case Association, 14377 Sharp Road, Sidney, Ohio 45365.

Those interested in advertising or contributing material for publication in "Old Abe's News" should contact David T Erb, Editor, Route 2, Box 242, Vinton, Ohio 45686. The newsletter is named for the original J. I. Case Company trademark (an eagle/"Old Abe" perched on the globe), which was first used in 1865

CORN FARMERS WHO DON'T USE FURADAN WILL NEED SOME EXTRA EQUIPMENT THIS YEAR.



You might want to get yourself a fertility doll. Aztec farmers depended on them for years. Then again, the Aztecs are extinct.
If you find one of these four-leaf clovers in your field, you're in luck. But you'll be even luckier if the insects don't find it first.
Nailing one of these over the barn door is supposed to bring good luck. Considering the potential of insect damage, you might want to hang up more than one.
Why worry about insect damage when you can simply get a rabbit's foot, cross your fingers and wish real hard.

Turgeon to head PSU Agronomy

UNIVERSITY PARK – Dr. Al J. Turgeon, from East Lansing, Michigan, has been named head of the Department of Agronomy at The Pennsylvania State University, effective January 27, 1986.

He succeeds Dr. James L. Starling, who in March 1985 assumed the position of associate dean for administrative management in the College of Agriculture. Dr. Daniel D. Fritton served as acting head of the Department of Agronomy since Dr. Starling's departure.

Dr. Turgeon served as group vice-president for support services with the Tru Green Corporation, East Lansing, Michigan, since July 1983. Tru Green is the second largest and fastest-growing lawn service company in the United States, with estimated sales of $40 million in 1985.

While with Tru Green, Dr. Turgeon was administratively responsible for research and development, technical services, purchasing and distribution, engineering services, training and safety.

Before joining the Tru Green Corporation, Dr. Turgeon was professor and resident director of research at the Texas A&M Research and Extension Center at Dallas from January 1980 to July 1983. As resident director, he managed the unit's research program, physical plant and other property of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station at Dallas.

Prior to 1980 Dr. Turgeon was associate professor of turfgrass science in the department of horticulture, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. One of his principal research accomplishments there was the characterization of thatch and thatch-like derivatives. He also demonstrated how integrating cultivar selection and herbicides can sustain weed-free turfgrass communities.

After receiving his bachelor of science degree in crops and soils from Rutgers University, Dr. Turgeon went to Michigan State University, where he received his master's degree in 1969 and his doctorate in 1971, both in crops and turf weed control.

Dr. Turgeon is a member of the American Society of Agronomy and the Crop Science Society of America. He is an honorary member of numerous golf course superintendent associations in Illinois, Wisconsin and Michigan In 1977 he received an Outstanding Achievement Award from Weeds, Trees, and Turf magazine.

The author of more than 200 scientific publications, Dr Turgeon has also written a textbook entitled "Turfgrass Management," originally published in 1980. Revised in 1985, it is the most widely used text on this subject in American universities

Wheat fingerprints help catch thieves

WASHINGTON – A U.S. Department of Agriculture researcher has created a computer bank of wheat "fingerprints" so accurate that it will verify a patented wheat–or even catch a thief.

A court accepted the bank's wheat "prints" as evidence in a 1983 grain theft case, and today wheat breeders and federal plant variety protection officials are increasingly using the bank. It is becoming especially useful for identifying plant varieties that have been patented.

Chemist George L Lookhart of USDA's Agricultural Research Service says wheat varieties are distinguished by a unique pattern, similar to a fingerprint, formed by separating either of two major protein classes. These unique patterns can be stored in a computer's memory. This method is as accurate as using fingerprints to identify humans, especially two people having the same sex, height, coloring, facial structure, body shape, and weight.

One of the first examples of how the computer bank could be used of wheat near Atchison, Kan., just after over $100.000 worth of wheat had been reported missing from the Farmers Co-op Elevator at the Atchison River Terminal.

The thieves couldn't have picked a worse time.

Lookhart had put identifying data into the computer only a few months earlier on the 88 most commonly grown domestic wheat varieties He compared the patterns, or prints, of wheat samples taken from the trucks and elevator with the 88 profiles in the computer bank He did the study at the agency's U.S. Grain Marketing Research Center in Manhattan, Kan

"The computer positively identified the seized grain in the trucks as being of the same variety as that in the Atchison River Terminal elevation," says Lookhart, who presented the evidence in court

According to Lookhart, one of the proteins, gliadin, was used to identify the wheat varieties in the court case. But the other major protein, glutenin, also can aid in identification.

He separates the gliadin proteins into bands using a standard technique known as polyacrylamide gel electrophoresis (PAGE) It distinguishes the wheat proteins based on differences in their molecular size and weight.

"After an electric current is passed through the gel and it is stained, it looks like gray Jell-O with dark bands that resemble rungs on a ladder," Lookhart says.

Once the patterns are formed, Lookhart measures the distances and intensities of the bands. He then compares them against the computerstored data bank. A PAGE analysis can take 6 hours but as many as 80 samples can be done in that time.

According to Lookhart, the computer bank's samples will be expanded as new varieties become available.

Agency researchers Berne L Jones in Madison, Wis., and Duane E. Walker at Manhattan, worked with Lookhart in developing the technique

Grange proposes Gramm-Rudman dairy alternative

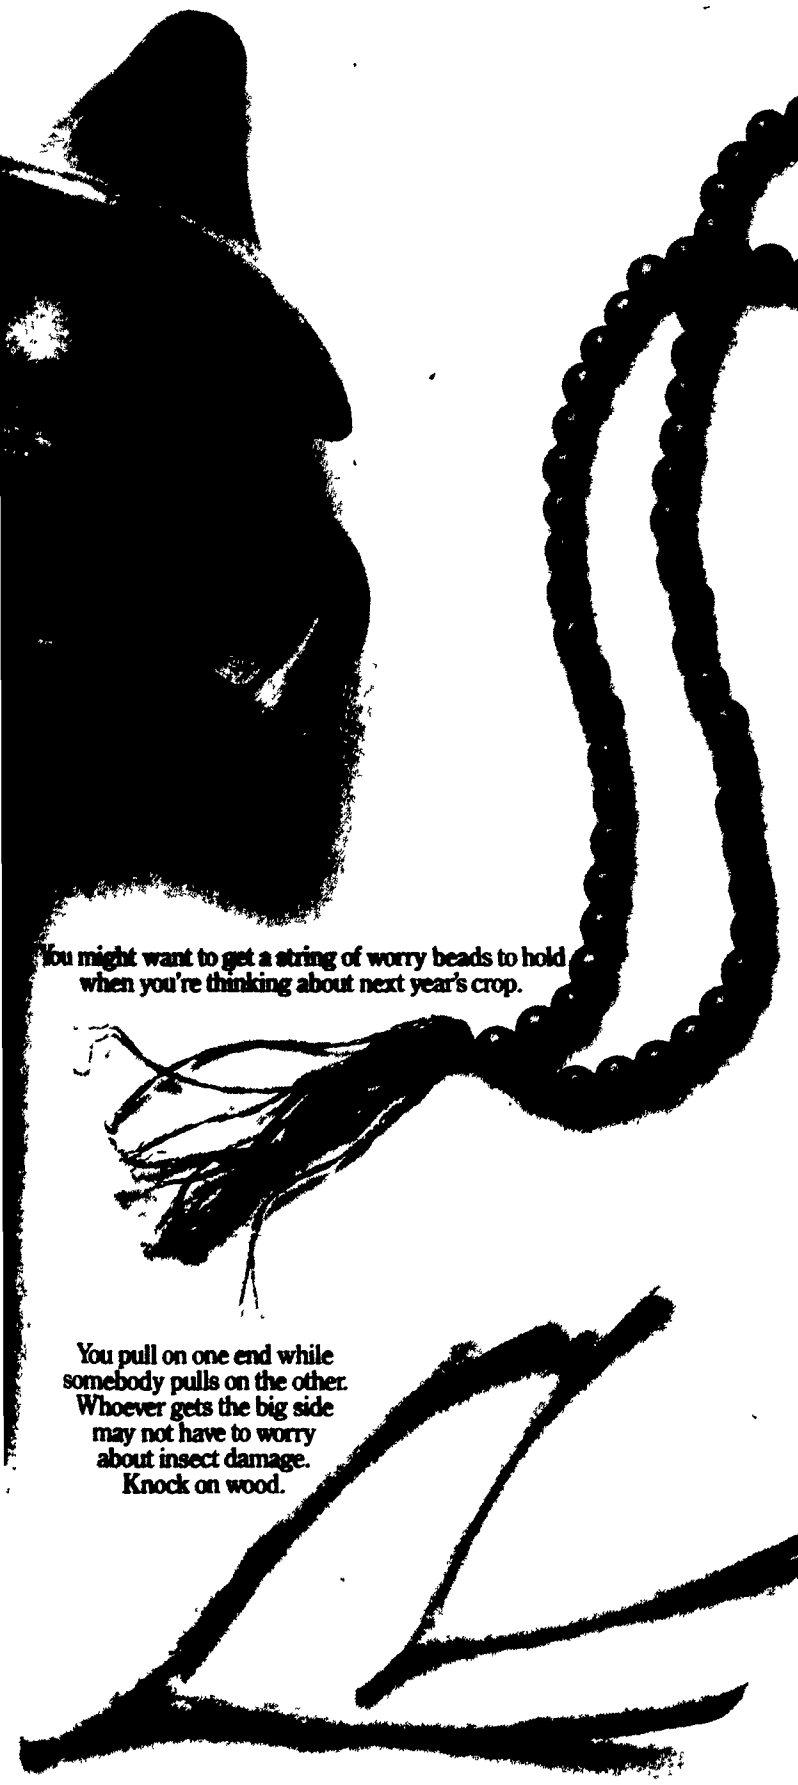
HARRISBURG – The Pennsylvania State Grange favors maintaining a price support level as an alternative to the Gramm-Rudman dairy cuts These proposed cuts would mean a loss of at least 40 cents per hundredweight of all milk produced starting March 1, 1986 until Oct. 1, 1986

State Master Charles E Wismer said the Grange is opposed to the Gramm-Rudman cuts on behalf of the dairy farmers "The dairy farmers would lose $320 million between March and October with the Gramm-Rudman cuts," said Master Wismer "These cuts are well over the 4 3 percent reduction of the commodity credit corporation," added Master Wismer

As an alternative, the Grange recommends a maximum 10 cents hundredweight assessment on all milk produced This assessment would cover the Gramm-Rudman mandate and amount to less than $80 million

"The Grange understands legislation will be introduced in Washington, D C this week which would authorize this approximate 10 cent assessment and plans to actively support this legislation," said Master Wismer.

The Pennsylvania State Grange is the state's largest farm organization representing 42,000 farmers and rural property owners in the Commonwealth



You might want to get a string of worry beads to hold when you're thinking about next year's crop.
You pull on one end while somebody pulls on the other. Whoever gets the big side may not have to worry about insect damage. Knock on wood.

Today, farmers are trying to find any way to save money. Some might even be tempted not to use Furadan® insecticide and trust their luck that insect damage won't be too severe.

But the hard fact is this. The money you'll save by skipping the Furadan planting treatment will seem small compared to the money you'll lose when you get a bad insect infestation.

It just makes good sense to buy insurance.

Furadan.

For over 17 years Furadan has proven effective against the worst threats to your corn crop. Insects like rootworms, corn borers and nematodes. As well as ten other pests that significantly damage your corn.

If you're thinking about doing without the proven protection that Furadan can offer you, think it over once again.

After all, without Furadan corn insecticide, you'll have only one possible defense against pests.

Lots of luck.

Furadan. It gets the bugs out of corn farming.

Budget cuts could drastically alter extension

ITHACA, NY – Five major programs and as many as 300 Cooperative Extension positions across New York State face elimination if President Reagan's budget cuts become effective Oct. 1.

The president's executive budget proposes a 59 percent cut nationwide for the Cooperative Extension system. However, New York's funding would be reduced 67 percent because of cuts in specific programs, according to Lucinda A. Noble, director of Cornell Cooperative Extension.

The federal allocation to New York would be slashed from $11.3 million to $3.6 million.

"A reduction of this magnitude will require drastic personnel reductions at regional and state levels," Noble said. "We will have to adjust allocations to county Cooperative Extension associations, regional programs, and college departments and administration," she explained.

"All segments of Cooperative Extension in New York State will be affected," she said, "but hardest hit will be the Expanded Food and Nutrition Education Program (EFNEP), and sea grant, integrated pest management, renewable resources, and urban gardening programs."

Cornell Cooperative Extension programs serve more than six million New Yorkers each year. There are more than 1,600 extension personnel across the state, including those at Cornell University, in every county of the state, and in New York City.

Nationally, $200 million in Cooperative Extension budget cuts could mean the loss of more than 10,000 positions in counties and land-grant institutions, Noble estimated.

"Reagan's cuts would drastically alter the complexion of Cooperative Extension as the nation knows it," she said.

Under the federal mandate that established Cooperative Extension, funding is shared by the federal, state, and county governments.

The $11.3 million from the federal government for the current fiscal year is about 27 percent of the total Cornell Cooperative Extension budget. The state provides $48.9 million, or about 21 percent, and county governments support the local offices with $20.2 million, 48 percent of the total budget. Program fees provide $1.6 million, about 4 percent.

"Elimination of 67 percent of the federal commitment undermines the confidence vested in the federal partner that has made it possible for Cooperative Extension to thrive in the state and nation, and to grow from a predominately rural organization to a system that now provides research-based knowledge to consumers, youth, agriculturists, and just about every segment of the population," Noble said.

Noble was one of 22 people on a national panel that developed a guide for the future mission, scope, priorities, and policies of the Cooperative Extension system through the end of the decade.

The Joint USDA-National Association of State Universities and Land Grant Colleges Committee on the Future of Cooperative Extension, in a 28-page report issued in 1983, recommended increased educational programs; improved farm and home technology; more translation of research results particularly for family farms, agribusinesses, families, and communities; a continuation of home economics programs; and emphasis on 4-H youth programs.

One USDA official said this week that states have the option of picking up the federal funding for programs being eliminated. This could keep alive the farm financial management program, for example, according to Gene Spory, director of management staff for the extension service.

"This has been a very successful program, but we have to set priorities even at a time when survival (of the family farm) is an issue," Spory said in a telephone interview.

This is not the first time that the extension service has had to deal with cuts, he added, but the Gramm-Rudman budget balancing bill "compounds the situation."

The first Congressional hearings on the president's cuts in extension funding are scheduled for March 20, according to Dale Stansbury, director of government relations for agriculture and natural resources programs at the National Association of State Universities and Land Grant Colleges.

"The Senate budget committee is already seeking information on the impact of these cuts," he said Tuesday. "I have a strong feeling that Congress won't accept the cuts at this level."

One solution to the funding problem that has surfaced would see extension reverting to agricultural programs only.

"That's alright for Kansas, perhaps, but not in a state like New York with nontraditional programs dealing with food and nutrition, local governments, and urban gardening," Stansbury said. "They might wind up being sacrificed if there is no proof of public support for them."

Noble said timing of the cuts is especially ironic. The first extension agent in New York State was employed 75 years ago this spring, making this the diamond jubilee of Cooperative Extension in the state.

Three of the state-supported colleges at Cornell, New York's land grant and sea grant institution, provide the backbone of Cooperative Extension programming in the Empire State. They are the colleges of Agriculture and Life Sciences, Human Ecology, and Veterinary Medicine, all located in Ithaca.

Hay, silage production up

HARRISBURG – Pennsylvania farmers produced more corn for grain, hay and potatoes during 1985 than 1984, based on acreage and production data.

Keystone farmers produced virtually the same amount of soybeans as during 1984 but fewer tons of corn silage. Corn for grain production totaled a record high 151.8 million bushels, two percent above last year. Corn acres harvested for grain amounted to 1.38 million and yielded a record-tying 110.0 bushels per acre. Corn for silage production at 6.52 million tons was six percent below 1984 production. Acres harvested totaled 395,000 with a record-tying yield of 16.5 tons per acre.

Alfalfa hay production at a record high 2.77 million tons, was three percent above last year. Acres harvested totaled 840,000 with a record yield of 3.3 tons per acre. All other hay acres harvested totaled 1.15 million acres which yielded a record 2.2 tons per acre for a record high production of 2.53 million tons.

Fall potato production at 5.72 million cwt is 11 percent more than 1984 production. Acres harvested amounted to 22,000 and yielded a record high 260 cwt per acre. Soybean production at 5.95 million bushels was unchanged from last year. Acreage harvested was 170,000 and yielded 35.0 bushels per acre.

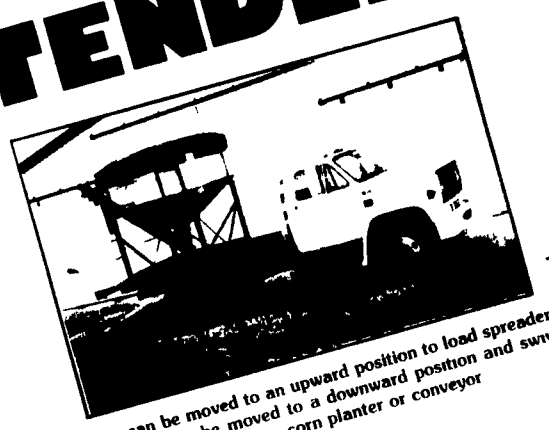
The GVM BULK TENDER



The auger can be moved to an upward position to load spreaders or trucks. It can also be moved to a downward position and swiveled back and forth to load into a corn planter or conveyor.

IDEAL FOR USE . . .

On the farm
- transportation of grains
- nursing drills and planters

In the plant
- bulk fertilizer deliveries
- customer loan or rental

The GVM Bulk Tender features:
- Low maintenance using a polyethylene tank with 304 stainless steel swivel sump and hopper
- A 9½' x 6" auger with the ability to move up and down, and swivel back and forth to load fertilizer into grain drills and corn planters.
- 5 or 7 ton capacities.
- PVC downspout
- Hydraulic auger motor

Please Note Tarp and straps are optional
The hydraulic hose, couplers and pump are not included

Pounce replaces toxaphene for cutworm control

FAYETTEVILLE – Cutworms can be a problem in most East Coast corn, especially that which is planted no-till. Where fields have a cutworm history, growers find it practical to use a pre-emergent chemical at planting to avoid almost certain loss.

For most, toxaphene has been used to forestall such damage–until 1987 when the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) decreed that it not be marketed or even applied. For Eugene Hege and many other area growers, Pounce (R) 3.2 EC insecticide, newly labeled in 1985 for cutworm and true armyworm control infield corn, was used as a preventive treatment.

"Pounce is a good, low cost alternative," says Hege who farms with his son, Brian, near Fayetteville, Pa. "Cost of chemical for four ounces per acre was less than $5–recoverable by saving just two bushels of yield.

"But we did much better than that," Hege continues. "We harvested 11 bushels per acre more where the Pounce was used." The Heges had Willard Chemical Co. custom apply Pounce on 170 acres of no-till corn. A 100-foot-wide check strip was maintained untreated in order to check results. By having the Pounce tank-mixed along with their liquid fertilizer and corn herbicides, they had no additional charge for application.

Hege, and more recently Bryan, who is a graduate of Penn State, have been growing no-till corn for eight years. Previously, corn was all reduced tillage on their Duffield soil. They operate a major hog enterprise and use lots of manure on corn ground. With careful soil testing and an intensive soil nutrition program, they grow lots of continuous corn. One field, Hege states, has been in continuous corn for 33 years.

Cutworms are the prime problem creating the need for use Heges to use a Pounce pre-emergent treatment. "We perhaps have more armyworms than we think," Hege says, "and may be getting some beneficial kill on these as well." He points out that stand count on the corn treated with Pounce was some 1000 more stalks per acre. Application of a corn rootworm insecticide, Furadan (15G(R) insecticide/nematicide, is a regular practice. Though it is a broad-spectrum insecticide and kills a number of corn insects, it does not control cutworms and armyworms Both Furadan and Pounce are needed on his no-till crop, according to Hege.

Across the state line, in New Jersey, the Jelliffee Brothers also used Pounce in 1985. The brothers, Bill and Jake, made their own application on 500 acres of no-till corn. Like Hege, they spent less than $5 per acre for chemical, used pre-emergent at a four-ounce-per-acre rate, and tank mixed the Pounce with their regular corn herbicides. They also had a rye cover crop. "The chemical worked," says Bill. "We plan to use it again on our no-till corn. We really didn't have any problems on our conventional corn except for a couple of small fields." The brothers produced a total of 1238 acres of corn in 1985.

In one seven-acre field near his home, Jake said the rye crop was baled for dairy herd bedding. "We haybined the rye and planted no-till corn with no pre-emergent treatment. We had big infestations of both cutworms and armyworms. We sprayed with Pounce as a rescue treatment and replanted immediately in the row. The chemical worked." Kill was total, he said.

In another 35-acre field which was moldboard plowed and planted in corn, armyworms wiped out the new corn. "We broadcast the Pounce was a rescue treatment," Bill says, "and we killed out the infestation. I think we also got some slugs."

The Jelliffee Brothers always use a corn rootworm insecticide and figure this boosts corn yields by seven to ten bushels per acre. However, on all no-till corn and in some other instances with conventionally planted corn, they have found that they also need Pounce for cutworms and armyworms. Pre-emergent treatment of no-till corn will be the rule again for this coming season.

Joe Newcomer, staff agronomist for Willard Chemical Co. at Frederick, Md., agrees that the pre-emergent treatment is needed. Willard, custom applicator for the Heges, operates five locations in the Mid-Atlantic region and not only supplies crop chemicals but also handles a major custom application business. Newcomer says five key insect problems threaten corn for this area. He puts European corn borers as the main threat, followed by black cutworms–the species controlled by Pounce. For cutworms, Newcomer recommends a pre-emergent treatment. "There's too good a chance that growers won't spot an infestation until too late to prevent heavy losses," he says, "unless they scout their fields closely."

Joe Newcomer

Eugene Hege

Other insect problems identified by Newcomer after European corn borers and black cutworms are corn rootworms (Northern, Southern and now Western), armyworms (though these are usually limited to corn after small grains and late-planted corn), and, finally, the corn stalk borer (which can be controlled to some extent by the pyrethroids).

Newcomer says the Pounce, which was custom applied by his firm this past season on no-till corn, accounts for 83 percent of all corn acreage in areas served by Willard.. A big advantage of the pre-emergent treatment is that it can be tank mixed with liquid fertilizer and herbicides with no extra charge for application.

Further, Pounce is effective According to Newcomer, "Pounce controls a broad spectrum of insects and is a logical replacement for toxaphene." As an agronomist for Willard, he has field-tested the product for the past three years and is "happy with the effectiveness of Pounce."

Pounce (R) 3.2 EC insecticide is manufactured by the Agricultural Chemical Group of FMC Corporation, headquartered in Philadelphia. The spring of 1985 was the first time that Pounce was labeled as a pre-emergent treatment for cutworms and armyworms. Pounce may also be used as a rescue treatment for cutworms, armyworms, Common stalk borer and European corn borer prior to ear formation at the same recommended rate as the pre-emergent treatment.

U.S. soybean farmers welcome Soviet purchases

ST. LOUIS, Mo. – It is time for a thaw. Whitewater, Wis., soybean farmer John Hoffman could be talking about his home state's wintery weather, but he isn't Hoffmann is talking about the Soviet Union. For the first time in more than a year, the Soviet Union is buying U.S. soybeans.

Recently, the U.S. Department of Agriculture announced Soviet purchases of U.S. soybeans totaling 1,077,800 metric tons, or just less than 40 million bushels

Hoffmann, who serves as secretary of the American Soybean Association, was in the Soviet Union in December on a trade expansion mission for U S soybean farmers. Traveling with Hoffmann were ASA staff vice president Michael Phillips, and staff of the Soybean Association's Vienna office

"These soybean purchases may mean a significant warming in United States-Soviet agricultural relations," says Hoffmann "But now the Soviets are looking for a stronger commitment from the United States Trade has to be a two-way street."

The Soybean Association is already working to pave that street.

In meetings with Soviet officials, Hoffmann learned of Soviet concerns about access to high technology...and the Soviet desire to be treated as a respected, valued trading partner of the United States.

At stake for U.S soybean farmers is a 696-million-bushel market. That's what the Soybean Association estimates the Soviet Union could need to adequately meet animal nutrition requirements

"We are providing the Soviets with technical assistance and information about soybean meal We want them to chose U S soybeans," says Hoffmann "We can offer technology to them that other soybean suppliers can't provide

"The Soviets have decided to feed their people better. They have made a commitment to improve animal production efficiency and upgrade livestock feeds The Soviets are going to purchase protein; the questions are how much of that protein will be soybean, and where will they buy "

During the meetings in Moscow, groundwork was laid for a feed manufacturing short course this spring in the Soviet Union And preliminary plans were made for joint cattle feeding trials which will feature local feed ingredients and soybeans The Soviets also indicated interest in increasing use of vegetable oil products such as margarines and mayonnaises

The Soybean Association's Phillips sees this expanding Soviet interest as a continuing chapter in a long-term effort to secure Soviet soybean markets

"Since the lifting of the 1979 grain embargo, the Soybean Association has worked hard to recapture lost ground in the Soviet Union," says Phillips.

He cites soybean farmer participation in trade missions; the addition of staff to the Soybean Association's Vienna office which serves the Soviet Union; and efforts in the United States to foster policies which facilitate trade

In particular, Phillips points to Soybean Association efforts to preserve contract sanctity and prevent future grain embargoes

"When the United States uses food as a weapon, U.S. farmers lose," says Phillips. "The Soybean Association is working to insure that contract sanctity remains in law as a protective shield for farmers "

Anti-embargo contract sanctity, which President Reagan signed into law in January 1983, says that while the President may still declare a grain embargo, he cannot cancel shipment of private export contracts for 270 days after that declaration

Soybean Association legislative efforts also include a proposal for a new trade category–Major Export Market – for nations like the Soviet Union which are not eligible for Most Favored Nation status

Phillips explains that MEM would allow a country preferred duty treatment for goods it sells in the United States, but would not provide the export credit eligibility that goes with Most Favored Nation status MEM could easily apply to the Soviet Union

Hoffmann says, "U S soybean farmers want to send a clear message to the Soviet Union We are serious about reliable suppliers We are committed to preventing trade embargoes, preserving the sanctity of contracts, and reducing market barriers. The Soybean Association wants to build the United States' share of the Soviet soybean market instead of being its soybean supplier of last resort "

GATT official says rules of ag trading to be liberalized

MIAMI BEACH — The "least-known international organization in the world" may be criticized by U.S. agricultural leaders for failing to promote more trade, but it has nearly 40 years of success in stimulating trade between countries, the group's deputy director-general said today.

William B. Kelly, a former U.S. government trade official who holds the No. 2 job in the Geneva-based General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT), addressed the annual meeting of the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives.

Conceding that GATT and other trade negotiations "have not benefitted agricultural trade to the same extent as trade in the industrial products," Kelly noted that it nevertheless has allowed a tenfold increase in U.S. corn gluten feed exports to the European Community and an increase of nearly 25 times in soybeans and products to the EC in the last 25 years.

What Kelly called the "major deficiencies" in agricultural trade rules negotiated by the governments of major trading nations are one of the principal reasons for U.S. advocacy of a new round of negotiations expected this fall.

Kelly reported to the farmer cooperative leaders, many of whom are major agricultural exporters, that a preparatory committee holds its first formal meeting next week in Geneva to work on recommendations for the negotiations to a meeting of trade ministers in September. Agricultural negotiations are likely to begin next year.

"Progress in the liberalization of agricultural trade is regarded as an essential element" if the new negotiations are to perserve the international trading system, Kelly said, but the prospects for success are uncertain.

"If domestic agricultural programs continue to be given priority over trade liberalization," he noted, "basic changes will be extremely difficult." However, in better times — "and a non-election year, significant results are possible, perhaps even probable."

Kelly described the work of the GATT Committee on Trade in Agriculture for the past three years in defining approaches to negotiation of rules for trading in farm products.

The committee has suggested two approaches for one of the most difficult issues — whether and under what circumstances countries would be permitted to continue subsidizing agricultural exports.

One, Kelly said, would improve GATT's rules by achieving agreement on how existing GATT provisions are interpreted. Because those provisions now are subject to a wide difference in interpretation, confrontations such as those between the U.S. and the European Community over wheat flour and pasta have arisen.

The other, perhaps more difficult to achieve, would "prohibit all export subsidies subject to carefully-defined exceptions."

While most countries are subject to political pressures to protect domestic agricultural producers, he suggested, they also worry about "the political acceptance by taxpayers of the increasingly huge economic burdens" of subsidizing agricultural exports.

That has, at least, led to the recognition that "the present situation cries out for improvement," Kelly said.

Heflin says ag spending cuts could be devastating

MIAMI BEACH — The Gramm-Rudman deficit reduction bill could become the "farm assistance reduction bill," Sen. Howell T. Heflin (D-AL) warned the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives here.

Spending cuts required by Gramm-Rudman, he said, could have "a devastating effect on a whole lot of programs. It might do just what a lot of us fought to prevent in the farm bill — the steady reduction of target prices."

Heflin observed that, "Over time, agriculture could face a lot of cutting," because the Gramm-Rudman bill has the same five-year span as the just-passed farm bill.

"We may recognize that we will need additional revenue," he said. But he added, "I hope that we can adopt an alternative approach" to the budget reduction mechanisms now being implemented.

The government also needs to have a better-coordinated policy for the State Department, Agency for International Development and the U.S. Department of Agriculture in which disagreements are decided in the interest of U.S. farmers, he said.

Heflin also urged more work on market research for agricultural products and greater research into reducing costs of production for farmers. "We also need an expanded cooperative function, designed to help save farmers money," he added.

Co-op head says Farm Bill will help U.S. farmers

MIAMI BEACH — Ben F Morgan, chairman of the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives, said that the 1985 Farm Bill will permit U.S. agriculture to be competitive again and reverse the situation in which its competitors were undercutting price and taking our markets.

"Without addressing this fundamental flaw in our farm program," he declared, "we were destined to lose our export markets which account for over half of the volume of many of our products."

Morgan added this achievement will be accomplished without the corresponding sharp reduction in farm income that ordinarily would have been associated with such price competition. This was critically important, he said, given the level of financial stress in the farm economy

The cooperative leader noted that NCFC had a major impact on the Farm Bill, but was able to do so in harmony with other agricultural interests He said these accomplishments came without sacrificing NCFC's traditional responsibility on tax, energy, and transportation issues.

Turning to internal matters, Morgan said NCFC continued to make progress on efficiencies associated with its three affiliated organizations. He said the combined staffs of NCFC and The Farm Credit Council developed and helped enact a major Farm Credit package important to both farmers and their cooperatives.

Morgan recognized the educational work performed by the American Institute of Cooperation stating that "cooperative education is the cornerstone of the future for our cooperative system."

The NCFC chairman added that "understanding by farmers of the vital role cooperatives play in assuring the availability of markets at acceptable prices and supplies at reasonable costs is essential if we are to maintain their support.

"But it has to go beyond just loyal support," Morgan declared. "As directors and management, we must be able to run our businesses competitively, and this too requires a sound education and training program."

NCFC President Wayne A. Boutwell elaborated on NCFC legislative achievements during 1985, and predicted that budget issues will dominate congressional debate this year. He said the recently-enacted Gramm-Rudman deficit reduction package will cut deeply into all programs, including agriculture, in an effort to achieve a balanced budget by 1991

Boutwell emphasized that while NCFC is supportive of budget reduction efforts, particularly in view of the need to bring down interest rates and the value of the dollar, we must ensure that agriculture isn't unfairly singled out when many farmers continue to be under great economic stress.

The NCFC president noted that tax reform is also expected to become intertwined with the budget. He said that program threats stemming from budget reductions will lead to calls for new revenue through a tax increase.

"We will continue to work for those provisions relating to the tax treatment of farmer cooperatives," said Boutwell, "as well as seeking enactment this year of legislation dealing with the cooperative netting issue. Both the Budget Reconciliation bill, still pending in conference, and the House-passed tax reform bill address that issue."

PX 9527 The Workhorse for Pennsylvania

PX 9527: Consistent performance and excellent standability.

Reserve some of your best ground for this high-yielding, mid to full-season hybrid. PX 9527 responds to top management practices, including early planting, 30-inch rows and higher plant populations. Good cold tolerance makes PX 9527 an excellent choice for reduced tillage acres, too.

PX 79: Favorite dual-purpose hybrid.

Ask corn growers in this part of the country what their most reliable hybrid has been over the years, and you're likely to hear "PX 79." Well-suited to a wide variety of field conditions, PX 79 also shows good resistance to diseases. A high-yielder for grain and silage.

PX 9581: Good choice for early planting.

This hybrid shows excellent root strength, plus good cold tolerance. Well-suited for early planting and reduced-tillage acres. PX 9581 is a tall hybrid exhibiting excellent plant health and good yield potential. Performs best under optimum conditions.
